Cut in home appraisals urged

by KURT BAER

Assessor Thomas M. Tully proposed Monday that homeowners' assessments be cut to the lowest level allowed by state law, 16 per cent of the property's market value.

The proposal, if approved by the county board, could help hold down 1978 property taxes in Maine, Elk Grove, Schaumburg and Hanover townships, which are now being reassessed.

It also may lower taxes in Wheeling and Palatine townships next year. However, the plan would have no effect on the whopping tax bills received this year by homeowners in those two townships.

IF LOCAL tax rates remain the same, property owners in Wheeling and Palatine townships could expect a 6 per cent cut in their 1978 taxes. Six per cent is the difference between assessing at 17 per cent and 16 per cent of market value. A home reassessed this year at $10,000, for example, would be assessed at $9,400 next year.

But because tax rates fluctuate year-to-year, Tully's plan is no guarantee that hard-hit homeowners will get a break when 1978 bills come out. Higher local tax rates next year could wipe out the lower assessment.

The 16 per cent assessment, as proposed by Tully, would apply immediately to property being reassessed in the Northwest quadrant of the county.

"I further intend to reassess all residential properties in the northeast quadrant at the new 16 per cent level. This unprecedented step will result in a reduction of 6 per cent of assessed valuation on those properties that received assessment increases in last year's quadrennial reassessment," Tully said at a news conference.

THE 16 PER CENT assessment would apply to single-family homes, condominiums, small apartment buildings of six units or less and cooperative apartments.

Tully first proposed lowering residential assessments to 16 per cent from the old 22 per cent level in July 1976. But in a compromise with local school districts that protested lower assessments, the county board last November set the assessment at 17 per cent of fair market value.

"As I have continuously maintained, that reduction was simply not enough," Tully said Monday.

The assessor also recommended

Rehearing rejected for Viator

by BILL HILL

The U.S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals has denied Arlington Heights' request for a new hearing in the village's six-year-old court battle to block construction of a low-income housing project near St. Viator High School.

The U.S. Supreme Court now will be asked to hear the case, Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel said Monday.

It is the village's final chance to overturn an appeals court ruling that the village violated fair housing laws in 1971 when it refused to rezone 15 acres for the Lincoln Green project proposed by the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp., Chicago.

IT IS THE SECOND time the Supreme Court has been confronted with the case. In October 1976, the high court heard oral arguments on whether the village's action was racially discriminatory and the court subsequently ruled in January that it was not a violation of the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. However, the high court ordered the court of appeals to decide whether Arlington Heights had violated the Fair Housing Act of 1968.

THE APPEALS COURT ruled in July that the village must find a suitable alternative to the site, at Euclid Avenue and Drury Lane, or be found in violation of fair housing laws.

It was the second time that a three-judge panel of the appeals court had ruled against Arlington Heights in a case that MHDC officials insist involves racial discrimination. Village officials say the refusal to rezone the 15-acre parcel for a 190-unit townhouse project is a proper use of zoning powers and a legal attempt to protect nearby residential property values.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS' request that the appeals court's full panel of eight judges reconsider the case was rejected because only half of the judges agreed to rehear it. Five votes were needed to grant the request.

Voting in favor of rehearing the case were Wilbur Pell, Philip Tone, William Bauer and Harlington Wood Jr.

Voting against Arlington Heights' request for a new hearing were Luther Swygert, Walter Cummings, Robert Sprecher and Chief Justice Thomas Fairchild. The ruling was made Thursday and received by village officials Monday.

Arlington Heights will be going against heavy odds in asking the Supreme Court to hear the case a second time. Each year the high court is asked to rule on about 5,000 cases but selects only about 300.

However, the high court may be more likely to take the case again because of the interest it already has shown in overturning the appeals court last year, said Philip Kurland, a University of Chicago law professor and high court observer.

DENISE DUITNAN, 19, of Schaumburg was seriously injured early Monday when she crashed into a utility pole along Schaumburg Road while trying to escape a man who handed her a threatening note at the Schaumburg Road and Salem Drive intersection. The alleged assailant, Everett D. Correa of Arlington Heights, was dragged about a half mile when his hand was caught in the window of Miss Duitnan's speeding auto. He also was listed in serious condition Monday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center.

Car ride turns tragic

by PAUL GORES

When a would-be assailant reached into her car early Monday, 19-year-old Denise Duitnan rolled up the window and stepped on the gas.

The car sped down Schaumburg Road as Miss Duitnan and her would-be attacker, his arm trapped in the window, wrestled for control. A half-mile later, the car skidded on the rain-slicked pavement and slammed into a utility pole.

Miss Duitnan's hips were broken; her face and head were covered with deep cuts. Outside, her assailant lay unconscious, his broken arm still pinched against the door frame.

SHE PULLED HERSELF out of the wreckage and crawled through a ditch, across Schaumburg Road, through another ditch and across the lawn of a house on nearby Tyburn Lane. She sprawled on the porch, crying for help.

Inside, the elderly resident was sleeping and never heard anything.

But Schaumburg firefighters, sent to find why power had gone out in that part of town, found her and put her in an ambulance to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village.

She is listed in serious condition. "She's in a lot of pain," said her stepmother, Jean Garcia, 1522 Chatham Ln. "I just hope she can walk again.

"God must have been watching her because she didn't get hit when she crawled across the road," Mrs. Garcia said. "We're just happy she's alive. Say a prayer for her; she needs a prayer."

IT ALL BEGAN, said Schaumburg Police Sgt. William King, about 2 a.m. Monday when Miss Duitnan was on her way home from work as a waitress at a Barrington restaurant.

She stopped for a traffic signal at Schaumburg Road and Salem Drive, less than a mile from her home. A car driven by Everett D. Correa, 29, of 427 E. Seegers Rd., Arlington Heights, bumped her car from behind, King said, and Correa signaled for Miss Duitnan to pull over.

Correa walked to Miss Duitnan's car and reached through the window to hand her a note that said 'I've got a gun,' King said. Miss Duitnan quickly rolled up her window and drove away, he said.

CORREA GRABBED at the steering wheel to prevent Miss Duitnan from making a right turn into the entrance to the Schaumburg Public Safety Building. His hand then was caught between the window and the door, and Correa was dragged about a half-mile to the intersection of Braintree Drive, where Miss Duitnan lost control of the car and crashed into a utility pole.

The car was demolished, King said, but Miss Duitnan was able to escape by crawling through a small opening in the wreckage. She then crawled across two ditches and Schaumburg Road to the doorstep of the house on Tyburn Lane.

Correa was found near the wreck and was taken to Alexian Brothers where he is in serious condition with a broken right arm and multiple cuts.

King said Correa was not immediately charged. Police recovered the note that Correa showed to Miss Duitnan, but no gun was found at the scene.

Custody story ends minus 2 characters

by RUTH MUGALIAN

Wojciech Bejnarowicz was finally going to find a home Monday.

The 7-year-old boy had been kidnaped by each of his parents in a custody fight that spanned two countries, and shuttled him across the Atlantic Ocean twice.

Monday it was supposed to end when a Cook County Circuit Court judge would decide if his new home would be with his father, Dr. Zygmunt Bejnarowicz of Park Ridge, where he had been living under police guard since November, or in London, with his mother, Margaret, who kept him hidden there for five years.

BUT TODAY Wojciech's future still is uncertain, and so are his whereabouts.

Wojciech and his father were to be in Cook County Circuit Court Monday when Judge John J. Crown awarded custody of the boy to his mother. But Bejnarowicz didn't show up, and Monday night his ex-wife's lawyers were looking for him.

"It looks like he's taken off," said Mel Sloan, one of Mrs. Bejnarowicz's lawyers. "We don't want to alarm anyone. We hope he's just panicked and gone temporarily berserk. But the psychiatrist said he could be potentially dangerous."

Bejnarowicz spent five years and $40,000 looking for Wojciech after his wife took the child to London in 1971 and hid him. She had been awarded temporary custody of the boy after a divorce and fled the country when her husband threatened to take him away permanently.

IN NOVEMBER 1976, Bejnarowicz and private investigators snatched the boy from his mother's side on a London street. The elder Bejnarowicz returned to Park Ridge and has lived there with the boy with relatives. Though he had been under police guard, Wojciech attended school for the first time. His mother had him tutored at home to keep her husband from taking him.

Bejnarowicz, an oral surgeon, had feared that his wife might win custody because of a report from a court-appointed psychiatrist that said Bejnarowicz had a "paranoid personality disorder."

Sloan and co-council Steve Schlegel went to Bejnarowicz's home about 8 p.m. Monday and served his sister, Alvina, and mother, Helena, with subpoenas. They are to appear in court at 11 a.m. today. The attorneys said they will ask the judge to issue a warrant for Bejnarowicz's arrest if he does not appear.

Schlegel said he had "no prior suspicion, whatsoever" that Bejnarowicz would try to flee with the boy. But he said he had a "gut reaction" about him based on the psychiatrist's report.

"HE SAID IN extreme situations he could be emotionally and physically harmful to the boy and wife, but I thought he would abide by the visitation schedule," Sloan said.

Judge Crown awarded custody of Wojciech to his mother after a two-week trial. But he ordered Mrs. Bejnarowicz to serve a 30-day jail sen-

Disabled veteran weds 10 years after his 'death'

LANCASTER, S. C. (UPI) — Jacky Bayne was married Sunday, 10 years after Army doctors pronounced him dead from a land mine explosion in Vietnam.

Bayne, 32, nattily attired in white formalwear, smiled broadly after kissing his bride, Patsy Lane, upon completion of the 20-minute ceremony watched by 600 persons at Immanuel Baptist Church.

"Everyone was just elated," said the Rev. Robert L. Tilley, who officiated. "It was a very sweet, moving type of ceremony."

PARTIALLY PARALYZED and confined to a wheelchair since his brush with death, Bayne's right leg had to be amputated above the knee in an effort to save him shortly after the explosion July 16, 1967. He had been guiding a patrol with his scout dog, and either he or the dog stepped on the mine.

The dog died and Bayne suffered massive torso and leg wounds.

Doctors had worked on him for 45 minutes and pronounced him dead, but an attendant in the morgue noticed a chest movement and rushed him back to the medical facility at Chu Lai.

HE WAS unconscious for a month as medical personnel there and at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, where he was transferred, pumped large quantities of blood and oxygen into his system.

Physicians at Walter Reed gave him little chance of survival and said he would be a vegetable if he remained alive.

"My mother stuck with me through all that, and Dad too," said Bayne, whose parents have since died. "I think that's what kept me going. And it proves the doctors are not always right because there's somebody higher than doctors."

FOUR MONTHS later he was sent to the Veterans Administration hospital in Columbia where he eventually met his bride, whose father was in a ward near his.

"They sent me close to home to die," he said, "but I didn't have any thought of dying."

He was in and out of the hospital during the next six to seven years, receiving therapy to regain his ability to read, write and talk.

His 28-year-old bride worked for his cousin at a textile mill in Rock Hill, and her cousin suggested she visit him, he said. That's how the romance started, but it was a year later before they started dating.

Austin citizens show thin skins for buffed pool

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Fearful the capital is gaining a reputation as "naked city," residents are raising war whoops about half-naked sunbathers at Barton Springs, a popular public swimming pool where Indians camped 150 years ago.

In 1839 half-naked Indians probably were the only people William (Uncle Billy) Barton ever envisioned sitting on the grassy hillside overlooking his ice-cold, spring-fed creek.

Nowadays, the hillside sloping into Barton Springs often is covered by seminude sunbathers, but protesters have been told there is nothing they can do about it.

THROUGHOUT the summer, angry residents have flooded editorial pages with letters linking bare breasts at the swimming hole with increasing rape statistics, "heathenism," the destruction of society and immorality.

" . . . It seems paradoxical to me that so many of the mothers and fathers now screaming about the use of Barton Springs by immoral barebreasted women are the same parents who have for years allowed their daughters to run around Barton Springs in bikini bathing suits," complained Mrs. R. W. Forrester, 50, who said "nudity is the next step after bikinis." She admitted, though, that she never visited the popular tourist attraction and picnic-swimming area.

"I wouldn't take my kids there for anthing in the world," said Susan Bordovsky, 27, a lifelong resident of Austin who said she has "seen a lot of changes, unfortunately for the worst."

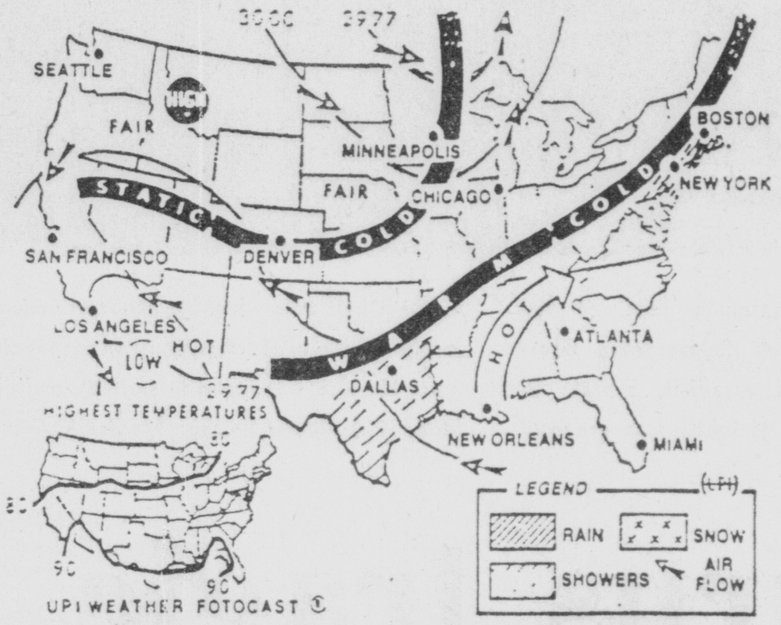

"I would think it would turn off tourists," she said. "It's getting a reputation as 'naked city.' "

Protesters who complain to city officials are told there is nothing they can do, that no state law bans public nudity and the city lacks such a prohibition among its ordinances.

Girl, 16, found dead near Old Orchard

The body of 16-year-old Susan Clark who had been missing since Thursday was found at 8:30 a.m. Monday in a garden near the Old Orchard Shopping Center in Skokie, police said.

Spokesmen for the Skokie Police Dept. said they did not know how the girl died. There were no visible wounds. Desk officer Ray Kozub said a rust colored top was found on the body. The girl had medium length blond hair. This matched the description of Miss Clark, police said.

The body had been in the garden "quite some time," said Skokie Police Sgt. Michael Burns. He said he could not be more specific.

Tentative identification was made through jewelry and a dentist's appointment card.

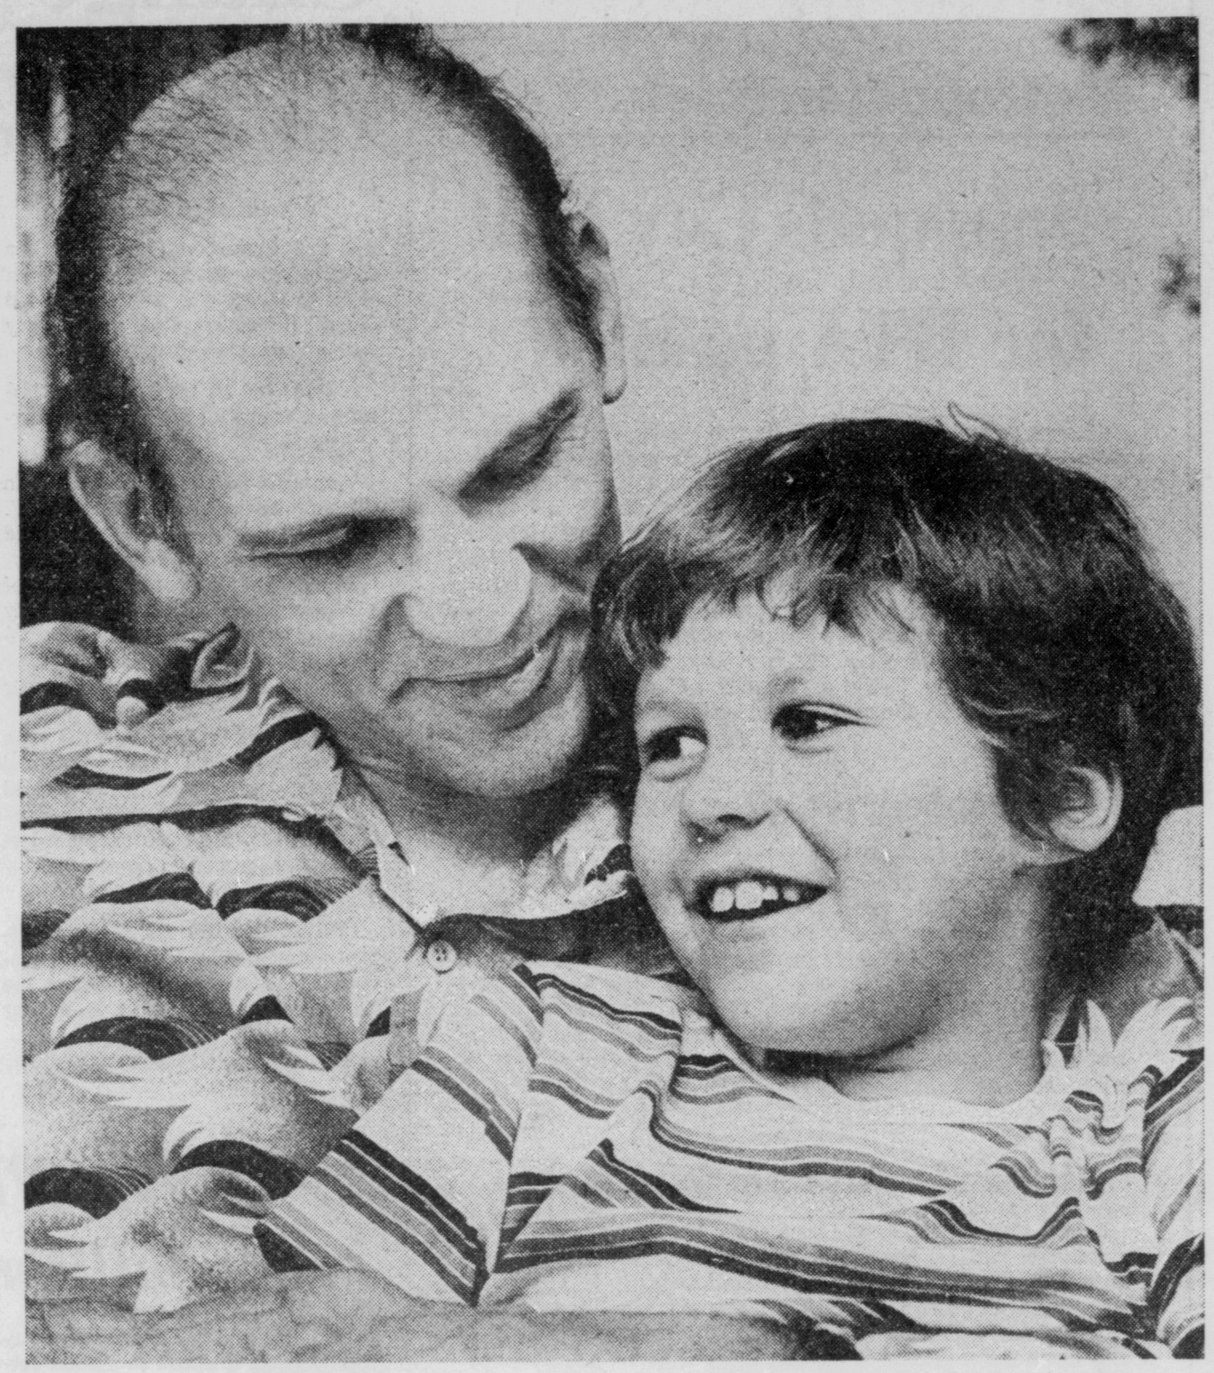

Skokie is about 40 miles south of an area near Waukegan where Lake County Sheriff's Police last Friday found the body of Lisa Anne Slusser, 12, who had been raped and stabbed to death.

The body found Monday night was in a vegetable garden about 1½ blocks north of Old Orchard Road just west of the Edens Expressway, near the Old Orchard Shopping Center.

MISS CLARK, a junior this fall at St. Scholastica High School, was seen last at 9:30 p.m. Thursday by Mrs. Nina Dorf of Lincolnwood, where Susan was baby-sitting.

"She had a definite appointment to meet her boyfriend at 10:30 p.m., and she was supposed to stop at another baby-sitting client's home on the way to pick up some very important materials," her father Richard Clark of 2453 W. Morse, Chicago, said. "But she did not make either appointment."

"She had nothing to run away from," Mrs. Clark had said. "We feel it's an abduction."

DR. ZYGMUNT BEJNAROWICZ and his son Wojciech were happy in July, nine months after Bejnarowicz snatched his son from his mother's side on a London street. Monday a Cook County Circuit Court judge said Wojciech should return to England with his mother. But Wojciech and his father were missing Monday night and Mrs. Bejnarowicz thinks the father has fled.

Three men arrested near crypt of Elvis Presley

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Police, expecting an attempt to steal the body of Elvis Presley for ransom, arrested three men Monday after a graveyard chase and charged them with trespassing.

Police said they could find no evidence to support a body-snatching charge against the men, identified as Raymond M. Green, 25; Bruce Eugene Nelson, 30; and Ronnie Lee Adkins, 26, all of Memphis.

They only were charged with trespassing — a state misdemeanor — and released about 15 hours after their arrest.

A fourth man, arrested at a local hospital shortly after the others, was released without being charged.

POLICE SAID evidence against him would not support the trespassing charge since he was not arrested at the scene.

Police said they failed to find any trace of the burglary tools they thought the men were carrying.

The three men were arrested in their car a short distance from the cemetery after stakeout officers saw them creep up to the door of the ornate, columned mausoleum and allegedly begin "meddling" with it.

Police, who were acting on an informant's tip that there would be an attempt to steal Presley's body, said they gave chase when the men ran — apparently frightened away by car lights near the mausoleum.

Police Director E. Winslow Chapman discussed the incident with Vernon Presley, the entertainer's father and trustee of the vast Presley estate, and said tight security would be clamped on the mausoleum.

CHAPMAN SAID extra officers were placed on duty at the mausoleum last week following a tip from a confidential informant and the suspects made a "trial run" at the body snatching last Saturday.

"Several days ago, information was received that a group of people were going to enter the Forest Hill Cemetery and break into the mausoleum, steal the body of Elvis Presley and hold it for ransom," Chapman said.

Police have worried about security at the mausoleum since Presley's funeral Aug. 18. Presley, 42, died Aug. 16 of heart failure at Graceland, his 18-room mansion here, sparking a pilgrimage of 250,000 mourners from across the country.

The body, which lies in a seamless copper coffin, was sealed in a crypt inside the mausoleum following private funeral services two days later.

An estimated 40,000 Presley devotees visited the mausoleum this past weekend, but cemetery guards said they were well-behaved.

SHORTLY AFTER midnight Sunday, Chapman said, four men apparently climbed over a 3-foot-high rock wall surrounding the cemetery, approached the mausoleum door, and were "meddling with" it when something frightened them.

Officers said a car traveling down a nearby road may have spooked the men when its lights flashed near the mausoleum.

Three of the men raced to a car parked on a road just outside the cemetery and drove a short distance before police arrested them at 12:32 a.m. CDT.

Chapman said the fourth suspect apparently twisted his knee while running and went to Baptist Hospital for treatment. Chapman said the man was reported by hospital officials because he matched a description sent out by police earlier and had a "suspicious explanation" of his injury.

Chapman said the men did not damage the mausoleum door although they were believed to have been carrying burglary tools with them. He said they apparently threw the tools from the car during the chase.

tence before she could return with her son to her native England. The sentence was for her original flight to England against court orders.

Mrs. Bejnarowicz said she thought the sentence was fair. Wojciech was to stay with his father for the next month. After the ruling, Sherwin said his client would appeal the decision and ask for a "stay of enforcement" on the decision to let Mrs. Bejnarowicz return to England.

"ONCE SHE'S IN London we'll have a difficult time making her comply," Sherwin said. "She never did before."

Sherwin said that the judge awarded custody to the mother because the father was a stranger to him.

"The whole basis is that the father was a stranger when he seized him," Sherwin said. "So she gets the benefit of her wrong-doing."

Bejnarowicz was granted six weeks' visitation every summer. Mrs. Bejnarowicz was to send the boy to the United States at her own expense. She also had to have Wojciech available for visits in London on 48 hours notice.

Conn. gunman kills wife, son; holds police at bay

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — A despondent gunman, who said he killed his wife and son, holed up in his house and peppered surrounding police cars with bullets Monday night.

The gunman taunted authorities by throwing a packet he said contained a stolen priceless silver collection from his home. He dared them to come out in the open and try to retrieve it. They did not.

Police Chief Clarence Drumm said he spoke with the gunman, identified as Frank DeCorleto Jr., 34, by telephone and was told the gunman's wife and 4-year-old son had been killed after being held hostage for several hours. Drumm said he did not know whether DeCorleto was telling the truth.

DRUMM SAID DeCorleto also told him he would refuse to surrender and would kill himself.

Drumm said DeCorleto also said he stole the priceless 18th century Pitkin silver collection from a town library earlier this month.

The collection, a 22-item set, consists of tableware from the estate of former colonial Gov. William Pitkin.

Police had said a ransom had been demanded for the collection two weeks ago with the threat it would be melted down unless money was paid.

Police said DeCorleto called the stationhouse earlier Monday saying he was an ex-convict. He complained he could not get work and asked for a policeman to come to his house in this middle-class neighborhood.

WHEN A cruiser arrived about 4:30 p.m., it was met with gunfire from a 30-30 rifle, police said. By 10 p.m. about 30 rounds had been fired, striking two police cruisers. Police withheld fire.

"He won't give a basic reason (why he did this)," Drumm said. "He's a very troubled man."

The wife and son DeCorleto claimed he killed were identified as Shidchon, 22, and Frank 3rd.

Earlier in the siege, DeCorleto's first wife, Cathy DeCorleto, 24, of East Hartford arrived and told reporters the gunman was an unemployed ex-convict.

Police said they were checking a report that DeCorleto had been convicted of a killing in Georgia.

"HE'S BEEN depressed all his life. He always had problems. He carried a gun everywhere he went," Cathy DeCorleto told a group of reporters while sobbing on a friend's shoulder.

Neighbors said they had not talked to DeCorleto because he kept mostly to himself.

DeCorleto's father, Frank Sr., was brought to the scene in an attempt to get his son to surrender.

Connecticut State Police Commr. Edward Leonard led a number of flak-jacketed policemen at the shooting scene.

Tropical storm threatens Florida, Louisiana coast

MIAMI (UPI) — A tropical depression raked the Gulf Coast with gales and gusts of wind up to 60 miles an hour Monday, forcing evacuation of offshore oil rigs. Forecasters said it may become the season's first tropical storm.

"A gradual increase in strength has occurred during the day and if this trend continues, it will be necessary to upgrade to tropical storm status," a 5 p.m. Monday bulletin from the National Hurricane Center at Miami said. "Gale force winds may affect portions of the Louisiana coast by morning."

One oil company sent helicopters and boats to evacuate all seven of its rigs off the Texas and Louisiana coasts and other firms began pulling in nonessential personnel.

A STATE PARK on the Louisiana coast was closed by high winds and torrential rains.

If tropical storm Anita is born from the depression, "rapid action may be required" by coastal residents to protect lives and property, the hurricane center said.

The ill-defined center of the disturbance was located at nightfall about 200 miles south southeast of New Orleans, moving slowly toward the west Northwest.

"Occasional gale force winds (39 mph) in heavier squalls have already been reported along the Gulf coast from the Florida Panhandle through Louisiana," the center said.

THE COAST GUARD auxiliary station at Shell Point, due south of Tallahassee, Fla., reported winds of 50 to 60 mph in a thunder squall at 4 p.m. The National Weather Service issued a severe thunderstorm warning for the three north Florida counties.

The depression pushed tides ranging from one to three feet above normal along portions of the Louisiana coast and forecasters said additional increase in tidal heights was possible before this morning.

Small craft warnings were posted on the Gulf coast from Tarpon Springs, Fla. to Morgan City, La., and the remainder of the Louisiana and Texas coasts were advised that the warnings may be extended later.

Walk down the aisle turns to jogging

• An Irish immigrant living in New York City set off from the Big Apple Monday for what he hopes will be a record-breaking jog across the country to San Francisco. Tom McGrath, accompanied by his wife of one-day and friends in a camper, hopes to average 60 to 70 miles a day in making the 2,300 mile run that will take him through Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Chicago to San Francisco's City Hall. The current record for long distance jogging is 2,760 miles in 53 days, 11 hours and 15 minutes. His new bride, Mena Monaghan, when asked what she thought about spending her honeymoon in such fashion — and with friends on the road — said: "I don't know what to think."

• A second African Marabou stork flew the coop at Brookfield Zoo, and zoo officials aren't certain whether it will result in a decreased number of baby deliveries or Vlasic pickles. The latest get-away stork picked up on the area's high winds Friday evening and was sighted over Kenosha, Wis., Sunday but it remains on the loose. Dennis DeCourcey, birdhouse superintendent, said the bird is 4½ feet tall and has a 6½ foot wingspan, slate gray back and wings, cream colored belly and a pinkish head. Observers of the bird are asked to contact the zoo rather than attempting to capture it. The first escaped stork died from injuries shortly after it was recaptured. The four remaining African storks at Brookfield Zoo are scheduled to be shipped to Los Angeles later this week.

• Actor Walter Pidgeon Monday showed definite signs of improvement and was reported "alert," taking fluids and food and breathing on his own. The 78-year-old Pidgeon, who recently underwent surgery for a blood clot on the brain, suffered a relapse a week ago when clotting developed in the lung. He now is listed in "serious" rather than "critical" condition, but remains in intensive care at St. John's Hospital, Santa Monica, Calif.

• American fashion designer Ken Scott says his violet-sailed purple yacht was fired on from the Lebanese port of Tyre en route from Beirut to Tel Aviv this past weekend. "It was very disconcerting," he said Monday on arrival from Israel. "They started shooting at us and I told my Turkish crew to head out to sea." No damage or injuries occurred, he said.

Percy asks probe of 'arson-causing' riot insurance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., asked Monday for an investigation to determine whether federal riot insurance may be causing "arson for profit," which he said is soaring in big cities.

"Urban arson is approaching epidemic proportions," Percy said. "In 1976, 1,000 persons died in deliberately set blazes, mostly in decaying neighborhoods, and property losses rose to an estimated $2 billion, almost double the 1975 level."

Percy expressed concern that the Federal Riot Insurance Program, established in 1968 to allow states to set up risk-sharing pools in arson-prone areas, may be encouraging arson for profit.

"BECAUSE insurance companies operate these pools on a cost-plus basis they often have little incentive to contest suspicious claims or to prevent the over-insurance of deteriorated properties," Percy said.

Percy asked the General Accounting Office, a congressional investigating agency, to analyze the problem and suggest legislation "to remove the incentive to destroy unprofitable . . . but well-insured, buildings."

Percy told the GAO that organized crime is reported to have conspired to arrange inflated insurance coverage, burn the buildings and split the insurance profits with owners.

"Yet, federal efforts to halt arson and interstate arson racketeering remain uncoordinated and, in the opinion of observers, demonstrably ineffective," Percy said.

PERCY, THE ranking Republican on the Ssenate Permanent Investigations Subcommittee, said authorities have evidence arson racketeers have been at work in Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, New York and other cities.

Percy gave these details:

Boston — Ten buildings on Symphony Road and six on neighboring Westland Ave. have had 20 major fires since 1974 that caused up to $1 million damage. Most had interconnected financing and-or rapid changes in ownership and burned under suspicious circumstances, Percy said.

Chicago — Arson-related property damage rose 15 per cent in 1976, from $18.9 million in 1975 to $21.7 million, and in the first six months of 1977 had losses totaling $15.5 million.

NEW YORK City — Incendiary fires have leveled entire neighborhoods in the South Bronx, West Bronx and Brownsville. The number of fires rose from 48,000 in 1972 to 56,000 in 1976, and officials estimate 25 to 40 per cent were deliberately set.

Last year arson in New York City killed 68 persons, compared to 29 in 1975, Percy said.

He said areas near New York City — Mount Vernon, Yonders, Newark, and Elizabeth — also have had a rash of fires in recent months.

Sain quits City Hall for RTA position

Chicago Deputy Mayor Kenneth Sain is leaving city hall to become the newest member of the Regional Transportation Authority. Named to the post Monday by Chicago Mayor Michael A. Bilandic, Sain said he is resigning his post as deputy mayor to practice law and management consulting. Sain, 40, will fill the vacancy left on the RTA board by the resignation of Pastora Cafferty in June. Mrs. Cafferty left the board saying the RTA is entering a new period in its development and should have a new group of board members. She said the older board members are scarred by battles fought in the early days of the agency. Sain expects to leave the $44,000 a year city hall post at the end of September. The RTA directors job pays up to $25,000 a year.

Man robbed, set afire near Ill. 7

Owen Clark, 47, Lockport, was robbed, then doused with gasoline and set on fire early Monday by several persons who offered him an automobile ride he refused. Clark was walking along a road near Ill. 7 on the east side of Lockport when he was attacked, a spokesman for the Will County sheriff's police said. Clark suffered burns over 35 per cent of his body. After the attack, he walked to the Lockport Township fire station for help. He was listed in serious but stable condition at Loyola Hospital in Maywood, a hospital spokesman said. Will County sheriff's police refused to release any additional information.

Gleason begins term for fraud

John S. Gleason Jr., former head of the Veterans Administration and former national commander of the American Legion, surrendered at the U.S. penitentiary in Marion Monday to begin serving a three-year sentence for bank fraud. Gleason, who pleaded guilty to bank fraud, served as VA director under President Kennedy. He also was a major-general in the U.S. Army Reserve, president and chairman of the Mercantile Bank of Chicago, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago and national commander of the American Legion. Gleason, 62, pleaded guilty to charges he concealed his interest in a firm which obtained a $528,000 loan from the Mercantile bank and charges he kept a $60,000 check which he recorded as a loan to a third party.

Teachers sue to stop transfers

The Chicago Teachers Union went to court Monday to try to stop the transfer of 270 teachers as part of a faculty desegregation plan. A suit filed by the union in Cook County Circuit Court requests a temporary injunction to halt the Board of Education from transferring any but the least tenured teachers at overstaffed schools. The court also was asked to order the board to allow a tenured teacher at an overstaffed school to select a new assignment from any existing vacancy for which he is qualified. The suit was filed by Robert Healey, the union president, and five of the teachers being transferred in the new program.

Leg replant fails

An attempt to reattach the leg a 17-year-old boy lost in a motorcycle accident has failed, doctors at Holy Cross Hospital in Chicago said Monday. Brian Schiffer was reported in good condition recovering from the operation in which the injured leg was amputated Friday. The leg had been severed Aug. 12 but it was wrapped in ice and taken with the boy to the hospital where his father, Kenneth Schiffer, persuaded doctors to try to perform the first leg replant. Three surgeons worked for more than nine hours to reconnect bones, nerves and blood vessels. The Schiffer family was described as "devastated" by the news that the leg had to be amputated.

Legion disease strikes Peoria man

Methodist Medical Center confirmed Monday that a 53-year-old Peoria truck driver is ill with Legionnaire's disease. Authorities, who refused to identify the patient, said he became ill July 23 while driving home from California. He was hospitalized in Iowa for pneumonia, then transfered to Peoria, where tests confirmed he does not have pneumonia but does have Legionnaire's disease, officials said. He is in good condition they said. The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said there have been 30 confirmed cases in the nation during the past year.

Suit filed in abortion death

A $1 million damage suit will be filed on behalf of the family of an 18-year-old woman who bled to death after an abortion performed at an outpatient clinic, an attorney in Granite City said Monday. John Bock, attorney for the family of Barbara Lee Davis, told a news conference the wrongful death suit would be filed against Dr. Hector Zevallos, director of the Hope Clinic for Women, when the abortion was performed June 14. An autopsy report at an inquest last week revealed that the abortion was performed when Mrs. Davis was in her 16th week of pregnancy. Bock said the law requires that a woman undergoing an abortion after 12 weeks be hospitalized.

Act against late election reports

The Illinois Board of Elections Monday took the first legal step against 20 political campaign committees delinquent in filing their campaign reports from last year's election. Richard Andersen, head of the board's public disclosure division, said 55 committees originally failed to meet the Aug. 1 filing date, but 35 have since complied. Anderson said the board, in its regular meeting Monday, ordered its legal division to set up "show cause" hearings for the 20 delinquent committees, at which they must show why further legal action should not be taken against them.

Among the committees still delinquent are three that raised money for former Gov. Daniel Walker's losing attempt to hold onto the governor's office. Andersen said the reports covered the period from July 1, 1976 through June 30, 1977.

Change not easily made: Hansen

Tully urges cut in home appraisals that the Homestead Exemption for persons over 65 be doubled from $1,500 to $3,000. The average tax bill savings for seniors also would nearly double from $150 to $300, Tully said.

A CHANGE IN the Homestead Exemption requires action by the General Assembly.

Tully said he already has talked to Illinois Senate Pres. Thomas C. Hynes, D-Chicago, and received Hynes' assurances of support.

Finally, Tully proposed formation of a blue ribbon commission to study changes in the property tax laws, including a change that could lower residential assessments below 16 per cent.

State law now states that the ratio between industrial and residential property assessments cannot exceed 2.5. Because industrial property is assessed at 40 per cent of market value, residential property cannot be assessed at less than 16 per cent.

OTHER TOPICS for the commission include annual instead of quadrennial reassessment, changing the number of tax payments in a year from two to four, and requiring that all tax referenda be held on the same day.

Tully, who has been the focus of taxpayer protests and who is up for reelection next year, said he is "deeply concerned about the plight of Cook County homeowners resulting from increases in this year's property tax bills."

James Tobin, president of National Taxpayers United of Illinois, said Monday Tully's proposal was "a step in the right direction, but will do nothing to save hundreds of homeowners in the northeast quadrant who will be forced to sell their homes to pay their taxes."

Tobin said he belived that Tully's plan was a response to the taxpayers' strike and protest that he has organized in Cook County over the past three weeks.

In addition to lower assessments, protesters still demand that all tax rate increases be subject to referenda held on election day, and that upon petition by 1 per cent of the registered voters in a district, a tax rate decrease referendum be called.

Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne predicted Monday that Tully's tax assessment proposal would find "sympathetic ears" when presented to the county board, and probably will be enacted.

But County Comr. Carl Hansen, said it may be legally impossible to change the assessment level in the middle of the current quadrennial reassessment.

"It is up to Assessor Tully to show the county board that it can change the assessment," said Hansen, who says he favors the lower, 16 per cent level.

"IF IN FACT it is not legally possible, I think it is irresponsible for the assessor to make such a proposal."

The state's attorney's office probably will have to outline the county board's power to recalculate assessments in the northeast quadrant, Hansen said.

A second problem is the multitude of taxing districts in Cook County that may already have borrowed against next year's taxes based on a 17 per cent residential assessment, he said.

"I certainly hope the assessor has researched the lawfulness of his proposal," said Hansen, noting that state law and the courts have required that assessments be uniform throughout the county.

A taxpayers suit, from persons in the northeast quadrant who paid taxes this year on a 17 per cent assessment, could tie up tax money for months and "wreak havoc" with local government finances, he said.

RTA unhappy about plan for $5 million for disabled

The Regional Transportation Authority plans to spend $5 million during the next year for transportation for the elderly and handicapped, but RTA officials aren't happy about the program.

"God knows what we eventually are going to have to do," said RTA Chief Operating Officer Leo Cusick Monday.

Cusick said federation guidelines on the elderly and handicapped have snowballed, leaving urban transit systems with a massive conversion problem and a staggering bill.

FEDERAL GUIDELINES call for the RTA either to modify the present transit system or provide special transit services for persons in wheel chairs or who can't climb stairs.

RTA board members are dismayed at the price tag, noting it will eat into existing transit dollars making it increasingly difficult to fund other types of programs.

"It's impossible," said board member Nicholas Bosen, noting transit agencies already hard-pressed for money.

The RTA program, scheduled to be voted upon at Thursday's board meeting, is designed as a temporary policy. RTA planners are working with other regional agencies to develop a formal program, expected to be ready this fall.

In the meantime, the RTA must have a program by Sept. 30 to qualify for federal funding this year.

THE INTERIM program includes the purchase of 300 buses with wheelchair lifts and a kneeling feature to make it easier to board. A hundred of the buses are scheduled for use in the suburbs, while 200 will be used in Chicago.

Another 100 small buses with the wheelchair lift option are being ordered for the suburbs at a cost of $1 million.

The feasibility of using these devices will be tested on paratransit services scheduled to begin in the suburbs this fall. Included in these services is a dial-a-ride and subscription bus service in Schaumburg.

Specially equipped buses also will be made available to any local government agency that needs transportation for wheelchair users and the handicapped.

The RTA will coordinate these various special transit services and will have information on them available at the travel information center. The center also will be equipped with a teletypewriter to provide travel information to the deaf.

RTA OFFICIALS said they plan to make some train and rapid transit stations accessible to the handicapped and elderly as rehabilitation programs progress. Certain Chicago Transit Authority stations already are accessible and others will be soon.

The interim policy states the RTA cannot be expected to adapt itself to people who cannot "get to a transit vehicle, board the vehicle and negotiate within the vehicle without any driver assistance other than the operation of a lift or ramp device."

Other agencies will have to assume the responsibilities for these people, the report states.

Boy, 10, charged in beating of girls

by DANN GIRE

A 10-year-old boy living in the Wispering Glen Apartments in Rolling Meadows was charged Monday night with the beatings of two young girls at the complex July 13 and Aug. 5.

The youth, who authorities would not identify, has been petitioned into the Cook County Juvenile Court for beating Tammy Morrow, 3, of 4718 Arbor Dr., in the storage room of the apartment building.

The youth also is accused of beating Cassandra Street, 2, of 4706 Arbor Dr. Both girls suffered minor injuries and were treated and released at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

ROLLING MEADOWS detectives said the boy was a suspect from the beginning, but it took time to collect evidence that would substantiate the charges.

"We feel we have plenty of evidence to go on at this point," Det. Donald Ballantine said. "The suspect was the only person who could tell the mothers of both victims where the children could be found (after the attacks)."

Ballantine said the suspect also was seen playing with the girls shortly before the beatings. Several times in the investigation, Tammy Morrow pointed to a photograph of the suspect and told police "He did it. He beat me," authorities said.

Ballantine said a break in the case came when Tammy saw a bunch of bananas on a table.

"Tammy told us that the boy came out of a car, or out from behind a car," Ballantine said. We showed her color samples we got at a store to see if she could tell us the color of the car. She couldn't. Until one time she saw some bananas on a table along with other things and told us that the car was 'a banana car.' Then we knew the color we were looking for was yellow.

THE SUSPECT'S parents own a yellow car, which they keep in the complex parking lot, he said.

Det. Sgt. Charles Smith said the investigation kept detectives working day and night shifts for nearly seven weeks.

"At least now we can alleviate people's fears that there's not a 12-foot high rapist roaming around Whispering Glen," Smith said. "We've had the place covered night and day since this thing broke."

Phyllis Morrow, Tammy's mother, signed a complaint against the boy in the Rolling Meadows police station Monday night, enabling police to send the suspect to the Cook County Juvenile Court, where he will be screened by authorities who will decide how the boy will be treated.

"We're hoping he gets psychiatric care," Ballantine said. "The parents are looking for help for the boy, not revenge."

Progress cited in Parkwood plan

by DEBBE JONAK

Unincorporated Maine Township residents will vote in the spring on whether to form the new city of Parkwood, if all goes as planned by organizers.

Gerald Feldman, leader of the incorporation drive, Monday said the legal process has been started to make the long talked about referendum a certainty in 1978.

He also announced Jack Siegel, federal judgeship candidate and village attorney for Arlington Heights, Schaumburg and Evanston, will donate his legal services.

"For the past few months I have kept still on this issue of self-incorporation in order to substantiate the (revenue) figures involved," Feldman said.

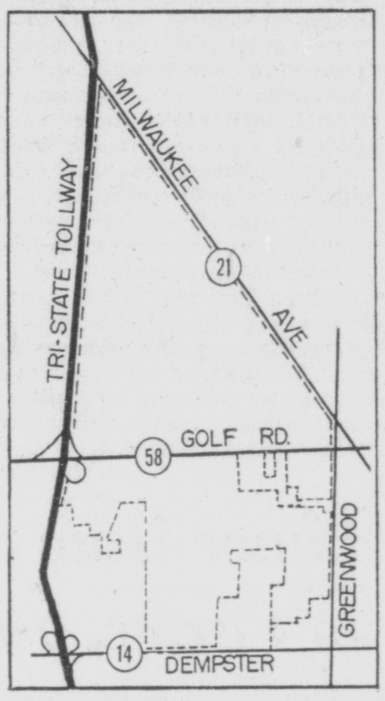

HOLDING A STACK of charts in his hands, Feldman said he and others who support the incorporation effort have proof that enough revenue exists to support the proposed city of about 22,000. A figure of $1.1 million is expected in revenue including a municipal tax rate of 30 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

The proposed city would include three square miles between the Tri-State Tollway, Milwaukee Avenue, Greenwood Avenue and Dempster Road.

Parkwood was selected as the name of the new city from a contest conducted earlier this year.

The organization committee is asking the Village of Niles to relinquish a strip of its property, containing a new shopping center and some apartments, to Parkwood.

That area lies north of Golf Road and west of Milwaukee Avenue. The commercial areas there would provide the city with a better tax base, Feldman said.

THE PROPOSED town of Parkwood would lie in a three-square-mile area designated roughly by the dotted line in map. Incorporation organizers are aiming for a spring referendum.

NILES MAYOR Nicholas Blase Monday said he would support the transfer.

"Something like that is feasible and I would recommend it to our board," Blase said. "I think they need an incentive like that."

Niles, Des Plaines and Park Ridge have informally supported the incorporation effort.

The committee is working on the first legal step toward incorporation -- filing the proposed boundaries with the state, Feldman said.

After the city limits are established a petition with 200 signatures must be filed with Cook County Circuit Court. The court then will set a date for the referendum.

"We're going to get it filed with the court as soon as possible," Feldman said.

THE INCORPORATION effort was spurred by problems with police protection, road improvements, zoning and building standards, he said.

"There is not a problem which incorporation could not solve," Feldman said.

He blamed most of the problems on Cook County, rather than Maine Township. The county has control over zoning, building standards, police protection and governing the unincorporated area.

The township only services the roads, Feldma said, adding road maintenance is excellent.

Maine Township officials, who are Republicans, and area Democrats have blamed each other for the poor conditions in the unincorporated area.

REGARDLESS OF who is to blame, Feldman said, residents of the area can improve the conditions by incorporating and passing their own legislation.

"If we so choose we may not fight city hall but build one of our own," he said.

The new city government would require about $903,000 to operate in the first year, Feldman said, presenting a proposed one-year budget.

The budget would include $225,000 for an eight-to-10-member police unit contracted from Cook County Sheriff's Dept. That would provide one officer on duty for two eight-hour shifts each day and three on duty for the night shift, he said.

Set aside for street maintenance, to be contracted from the township, is $437,000.

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION, including a city manager, inspectors and office help, would cost $241,000, Feldman said.

The $1.1 million in expected revenue does not include the area of Niles that may be transferred to Parkwood, he said.

About $285,743 would come from the 30 cent tax rate, which would add $28 in taxes to a home with an assessed valuation of $8,000. The tax rate is much lower than most towns in the area.

Other sources of income would be:

- Income tax rebate, $286,000.
- Motor fuel tax rebate, $253,000.
- Vehicle stickers, $132,000.
- Federal revenue-sharing, $125,000.
- Sales tax, $50,000.

The cost of the incorporation drive would be from $2,500-5,000 and must be financed through donations, Feldman said.

THE COST IS LOW, because Siegel agreed to provide legal services at no cost, he said.

"Someone has to step forward and take responsibility for the area. We cannot go on being developed by luck and by the greed of a few men," he said, referring to the 1974 Maine Township zoning scandal.

Floyd Fulle, former Cook County commissioner, was convicted in 1975 for extorting money from two developers in exchange for zoning favors.

Backyard zoo is health haven for hurt animals

by DEBBE JONAK

The ducks will fly away this fall. The raccoons already are gone.

"We raise them, fatten them up and kick them out," said Tom Petersen, 106 N. Elmhurst Rd., Prospect Heights.

Petersen, his wife Lydia, their three children and two foster children live in what looks from the road like any other small, frame house in the city.

BUT INSIDE, and on the two-acre stretch of shady land behind, is a menagerie of maimed or abandoned creatures from the vanishing wilds of Cook County.

The Petersens are licensed by the Illinois Conservation Service to salvage animals found orphaned or hurt. River Trail Nature Center in Northbrook and other agencies and individuals drop off dozens of such animals each spring and summer when there is no room left at the shelters.

The Petersens nurse the animals back to health and return them to the wild — without any reimbursement for feed or veterinarian costs.

"We had 30 raccoons this season," Mrs. Petersen said. They all were turned loose on 40 acres of woods the family owns in Wisconsin. Some of the animals are freed in natural areas in the Northwest and North suburbs.

"We have hardly any animals left now," she said.

OUTSIDE, TWO turkeys, fat and thickly feathered, gobbled loudly at each other. Ten ducks plodded from the pond to the house and back again.

There were geese, doves, a skunk, 25 rabbits, roosters, chickens, two dogs, a cat and a crow with a broken wing. Some are the Petersens' pets, most are temporary residents.

Mrs. Petersen, a dark-haired, 35-year-old personification of Mother Nature, cupped a trembling young pheasant in her hands.

"People think we have a small zoo here. But it's not a small zoo," she said "It's a —"

"Medium zoo," her daughter, Randy, 13, offered.

RANDY IS responsible for cleaning and feeding the rabbits. She also cares for some of the ducks, watching them mature from downy chicks to flight-ready adults.

"There was Clyde (a duck), I fed him since his eyes were closed," she said. Clyde flew away in the fall of last year.

Randy sighed. "You know it's better for them. They're not cooped up in a cage," she said.

"How could you not take care of an injured bird?" Mrs. Petersen said, trying to explain the family's involvement with handicapped creatures.

"WE'VE SEEN too many of the animals destroyed," her husband said.

Petersen, 36, shop foreman for a Hinsdale car dealer, is a long-time animal lover. As a teen-ager, he worked for a veterinarian and often carried a mouse around in his shirt pocket.

They obtained an animal salvage license four years ago, shortly after they moved to Prospect Heights.

"We started with raccoons and bred them for a year," Mrs. Petersen said. "But we decided it wasn't fair — people (who bought them for pets) didn't take care of them."

THEY MISSED the company of the animals, though, and offered to take care of the sick and abandoned from River Trail.

About the same time, they decided to take foster children into their home.

"I wanted a big family, but he said there are too many kids in the world already. So it was a compromise," Mrs. Petersen said.

And so the Petersen household became a home for wayward children, as well as animals. The two helped each other mend the injuries of the past.

"THEY THINK if you give them an animal to take care of, you're thinking of them, you trust them. They tell their problems to the animal," said Randy, who has seen 14 foster brothers and sisters come and go.

The animals become part of the family, traveling with the Petersens on occasional camping trips. The dogs, four raccoons and the pheasant were taken on a recent excursion to the Wisconsin Dells.

Those left behind are fed by a neighbor, who brings along a stick because the turkeys don't like him and chase him like watchdogs.

The neighbors do not complain about the virtual barnyard backyard of the Petersens.

"The animals are pretty much confined to our property and rarely wander off," Petersen said.

Occasionally, though, one finds its way out.

"WE HAD A ferret that was so smart, he'd get out of his cage all the time," Mrs. Petersen said. "He once went into a neighbor's house through the bathroom window — she was on the pot and screamed so loud I heard it all the way over here."

The same cunning ferret regularly strolled down to a nearby gas station to scavenge candy bars from the attendants there.

The animals also cause trouble for the Petersens now and then. A previously complacent skunk chose an inopportune time to release his odorous defense — Randy's graduation party.

If the Petersens' sleep too late, the turkeys and ducks congregate at the door, squawking and beating against it until someone answers.

"The animals make a mess and have an odor occasionally," Petersen said. "But the benefits far outweigh those things."

"It'd be awfully dull in that backyard without the birds," Mrs. Petersen said. "It's fun to walk outside and see all that livelihood."

Teens held in breakins admit to 38 burglaries

by KEN VANDERBEEK

Two teen-agers arrested during the weekend on charges of burglarizing two Mount Prospect schools, have admitted to at least 38 other burglaries in Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights, police said Monday.

Ralph S. Barnes, 18, of 1912 Greenfield Ct., Mount Prospect, admitted to all the burglaries and also implicated a 16-year-old juvenile from Arlington Heights, who later admitted to the same crimes during questioning Monday, police said.

The two youths and a 17-year-old girl, Michele L. Patterson, 107 Babcock Dr., Palatine, each were charged with two counts of burglary for the weekend burglaries of Prospect High School, 801 Kensington Rd., and Westbrook School, 105 S. Busse Rd., both in Mount Prospect. Miss Patterson was not implicated in the other burglaries, police said.

THE THREE youths are accused of breaking into the assistant principal's office at Prospect High School, where they went through files at 2 a.m. Sunday, police said. Although there was no report of missing items, police said a desk in the office had been rifled.

Blair Gill, a maintenance employe at the school, reported the burglary when he noticed a fire extinguisher out of place and a light on in the office, police said.

When police were investigating Gill's report, the youths were breaking into Westbrook School, police said. But this time a security alarm alerted police and they arrested Barnes and the juvenile at the scene. Miss Patterson ran away but was arrested three hours later, police said.

During questioning Monday, the boys said they had planned the burglary of Prospect High School while at the Holiday Inn at 200 N. Rand Rd., Mount Prospect, earlier in the day, police said. It was during questioning that Barnes and the juvenile also admitted to 38 other burglaries.

Rehearing rejected in Viator

he will file a petition in about 60 days asking the Supreme Court to hear the case. A decision on that request is not expected before the end of the year.

Siegel said his petition to the Supreme Court basically will be the same as that made to the appeals court in asking for a rehearing.

"Our position is that there was no racial discrimination in administering our zoning ordinances, which the Supreme Court has upheld. How can it be a violation of the Civil Rights Act if it wasn't a violation of the 14th Amendment," Siegel said.

The court of appeals also acted improperly in accepting new evidence, rather than considering only evidence brought in the original trial before a federal district judge, Siegel said.

He also objected to the burden of proof being switched to the village.

"THE COURT IGNORES the fact that the village is not in the business of providing housing under any circumstances for whites or blacks. The village is not interfering with the plaintiff's attempt to build integrated housing. The village is simply saying that this is the wrong place for a multiple-family development, even if it is to provide low- and moderate-income housing," Siegel's legal brief states.

Willis Caruso, MHDC attorney, was not available for comment Monday. In his legal briefs before the appeals court, Caruso has accused Arlington Heights officials of racial hostility and insensitivity to low-income housing.

"The implication of statements in the petition (filed by Arlington Heights) are more distressing for they show the continuing irresponsible attitude of white village officials with respect to the segregated housing crisis in the Chicago metropolitan area," Caruso says in one of his briefs.

The village's "assertion that the opinion will require two zoning ordinances — one for the poor and the black, and another for the rest of the community — mirrors racial animus and provides insight into the white suburban syndrome that continues to separate black and poor from the rest of the community," Caruso says.

ABOUT 400 OFF-DUTY Indianapolis policemen parked their squad cars around police headquarters and the City-County Building in that downtown area Monday to protest the city's latest contract proposal. They locked the cars, leaving them with red lights flashing and sirens blaring. Working policemen used coat hangers to unlock the cars and turn off lights and sirens.

Depression may result by '79 Javits warns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The combination of worldwide unemployment, inflation and oil debts could lead to a depression longer than the one of the 1930s, Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., warned Monday.

He called for revamping the world monetary system to ease "the danger of a severe economic depression — perhaps as early as in 1979 or 1980 — if adequate economic and political measures are not taken to shore up the fragile structure of the international economic system."

Among ways to prevent such a depression, he said, is political pressure on Arab oil-producing nations to lend more of their available capital to developing countries, and an end to the worldwide arms race "to provide more elbow room in the budget for more productive economic purposes."

ADMINISTRATION officials, also testifying before the Senate international finance subcommittee, disagreed with Javits' assessment, saying that despite great debts owed to oil nations by the poor countries, the world monetary system is working.

They said, however, the system was strained after the Arab oil embargo of 1973 and the resulting price rise for petroleum, which caused a nearly $40 billion trade surplus for the oil nations and the same amount in debts by the "less developed countries."

Javits chided the administration for declaring the "moral equivalent of war" in its attempt to gain energy independence but not taking risks associated with war to revise the world monetary order.

A new global economic crisis, Javits said, "could last as long as the last depression of the 1930s and possibly even longer because, obviously, in this age of atomic warfare, we cannot expect to have the war-led recovery that occurred then."

ANTHONY SOLOMON, under-secretary of the treasury for monetary affairs, testified: "There is no evidence that the international monetary system is presently in danger either from general overborrowing by uncreditworthy countries or general overextension of the banking system."

Henry Wallich, a governor of the Federal Reserve System, said the imbalance of payments caused by the oil situation "does not seem to pose any imminent threat to the stability of the world economic and financial system."

Richard Cooper, undersecretary of state for economic affairs, said President Carter's energy program is "a critical step toward preserving a stable international economy" because it aims at reducing dependency on foreign oil.

Parole for Gordon Liddy set Sept. 7

Even though Watergate burglar G. Gordon Liddy took part in a prison hunger strike and kept concealed weapons in his cell, he will be paroled on schedule Sept. 7, a federal parole commissioner said Monday. Regional Commissionr Joseph A. Nardoza, in Philadelphia said, "I think he has served long enough. He has paid his debt to society. I honestly think he is going to be a good citizen when he gets out." Officials of the Allenwood Prison Camp in Pennsylvania discovered a wooden sickle handle and a piece of pipe behind Liddy's bed Aug. 20 when he was transferred to the U.S. Penitentiary at Lewisberg for taking part in a four-day "food boycott." Prison officials reported finding the weapons which Liddy said he kept for self-protection. The officials did not consider the discovery serious enough to recommend delaying his parole or imposing other penalties. "The major reason that I made the decision to make no change was because the institution had admirably handled the matter to my satisfaction," Nardoza said.

Mideast talks set in Washington

Arab and Israeli foreign ministers will come to Washington next month for a resumption of the Middle East talks, diplomatic sources said Monday, with the White House taking direct part in attempts to break the deadlock over reconvening the Geneva Middle East conference. The sources said the foreign ministers of Israel, Egypt, Syria and Jordan are scheduled to arrive in Washington "shortly after the middle of September." They are to confer with U.S. officials, but no Arab-Israeli talks are planned.

The original plan, developed during Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's Middle East trip earlier this month, called for Vance to confer with the Arab and Israeli foreign ministers in New York during the United Nations General Assembly scheduled to begin Sept. 20. However, the Palestine Liberation Organization since has rejected a proposed formula for accepting U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which in effect would have meant the PLO recognized Israel's right to exist as a Middle East state. Now the foreign ministers are faced with the necessity of setting up a new formula for participation in a Geneva conference since Israel will not accept the PLO as a negotiating partner.

Concorde's Kennedy flights put off

Test flights of the Concorde supersonic jetliner at Kennedy Airport, expected to begin early next month, were put off Monday until late September at the earliest The delay was granted by the 2nd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in Manhattan to allow the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey time to appeal the court-ordered tryout of the Anglo-French SST. The appellate court scheduled Sept. 19 to hear arguments in the Port Authority's effort to reverse U.S. District Court Judge Nilton Pollack's approval of the SST trial at Kennedy, which the bi-state agency operates.

Rare roast beef on way out?

Rare roast beef may become a treat of the past on many delicatessen counters under a ban by the Agriculture Department expected on Tuesday. Under the regulation, processors who prepare precooked roast beef, which is sold primarily through delicatessens, will be required to heat it to an internal temperature of 145 degrees, a spokesman said. "This means they won't be able to make it rare. At most, it will be barely pink," one expert said. Officials said the decision followed up recent requests to three northeastern processors to recall several lots of rare roast beef because of salmonella contamination.

Envoys discuss Rhodesia peace

British and American envoys seeking a peace plan for Rhodesia held an unexpected second round of talks Monday with Prime Minister John Vorster, whose support is crucial to their mission. Originally, U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, British Foreign Secretary David Owen and Vorster had scheduled only a morning meeting. Their surprise second session began at dusk. Early Monday, before the first talks began, Pretoria police confiscated about 20 placards found in city streets that read "Young is our enemy — kick him out." After two hours of talks Monday night, South African Minister of Foreign Affairs "Pik" Botha reported, "We fully discussed the Rhodesian issue today. I am not in a position to characterize the talks in any way."

Lance issue not disturbing to Carter, assistant says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's spokesman threw fresh support around beleaguered Budget Director Bert Lance Monday, and said Carter has not suffered "paranoia, exasperation or upset stomach" as a result of the controversy over Lance's financial dealings.

"I think I've made it clear there is no feeling on our part Lance has taken any action that would merit his being run out of government, and that's still our position," said White House Press Sec. Jody Powell.

As for Carter, Powell said during another news briefing dominated by the controversy, "he has not appeared to me to be visibly disturbed — period."

"He has not shown any signs of exasperation, paranoia or upset stomach," Powell said. "I think he fully understands the difficulty of the process."

EARLIER IN THE day, Lance, who is perhaps the President's closest associate, attended a Cabinet meeting, but Powell said the controversy "was not discussed in detail." The Cabinet meetings had been recessed for a three-week vacation break.

It was reported during the weekend that Lance had not fully reported his financial situation at the time of his confirmation hearings.

"My understanding is that Mr. Lance has complied with the standards. If the Senate committee determines there was information they should get, he'll make it available to them," Powell said.

Powell also denied there was any conflict in the relationship between Lance and his trustee, Thomas Mitchell. He said a main question is whether the trustee can act independently.

"That is strictly a problem between Mr. Lance and the trustee, should that occur. It involves the public interest not one whit," Powell said.

POWELL REFUSED to comment on calls by AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany and Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., that Lance resign.

Powell also said Lance had "at least" $1.2 million to $1.3 million in unencumbered assets at the time he used the same collateral for two loans. The spokesman contends this shows Lance had no desire to do anything wrong.

In other developments:

• Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum, reviewing the two-hour Cabinet meeting, said the department heads were briefed on the Panama Canal treatits by negotiators Ellsworth Bunker and Sol Linowitz.

• Alan Campbell, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, said Carter "was inclined" to accept a recommendation for a 7.05 per cent raise for all non-executive level federal employes effective Oct. 1. The last increase was 4.8 per cent a year ago.

The recommendation was made by an advisory panel composed of Campbell, Lance and Labor Secrttary Ray Marshall.

Meany parts with Carter on backing Lance

WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany Monday said he disagrees with President Carter's claim that Bert Lance is competent to be director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Meany meanwhile praised the administration for the first time in many months. He suggested the AFL-CIO, a conservative force on foreign policy issues, will endorse the proposed new Panama Canal treaty.

Carter, who has been seeking support for the treaty, recently patched up differences with the AFL-CIO by endorsing two key labor bills. The treaty endorsement was seen as a return favor.

Meany told a news conference during a meeting of the AFL-CIO Executive Council that the federation has no intention of calling for Lance's resignation. He said there was no evidence Lance had violated any law by benefiting personally from his previous position as a bank president.

"THE ETHICS seem to be that if you're president of a bank, you get certain favors," Meany said.

But the labor chief said he disagrees with anyone who claims Lance still is competent to serve as budget director.

"Everybody says he's competent," Meany said. "Now from what I read he's pretty clumsy. I don't think his experience as a banker . . . would indicate to me that he's got the qualifications that are necessary to be director of the Office of Management and Budget.

"I'm just saying that the argument that he's competent is not substantiated by the record."

TRANSSEXUAL TENNIS player Renee Richards, left, denied Monday she plans to marry Michael Backus.

Renee Richards denies rumored marriage plans

NEW YORK (UPI) — Transsexual tennis player Renee Richards Monday denied she plans to get married, and said she only was interested in the upcoming U.S. Open tennis championships.

A published report Monday said Dr. Richards would call a news conference later this week to announce her engagement to actor Michael Backus.

"There is not one speck of truth in the rumor that I am thinking about or considering marrying Mr. Backus or anyone else," Dr. Richards said at the West Side Tennis Club, where she is training for the tournament that begins Wednesday. "I an interested only in doing my best at Forest Hills.

"Mike Backus and I are good friends, but someone is reading more into this than there is," she said. "We're not planning anything so serious as marriage at this time. I especially want to emphasize that fact."

Dr. Richards, who until August 1975 was a male ophthalmologist known as Richard Raskind, said she met Backus earlier this summer at a party on Long Island.

She was permitted to play in the U.S. Open as a woman after a court battle in which a judge ruled she could not be forced to take a sex hormone test.

The U.S. Tennis Assn. had said Dr. Richards would have to take the test to determine her gender, a test the court said would be discriminatory.

16 Ugandans plead guilty in plot against Idi

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Radio Uganda Monday said 16 prominent Ugandans pleaded guilty before a military tribunal to planning to overthrow President Idi Amin in a plot that also allegedly involved the country's late Anglican archbishop.

The suspects, including top civil servants and other leading Ugandans, will be sentenced at a later date, but the military tribunal was expected to order them shot by firing squad. Their trial began last week.

The radio said the alleged plot had been timed to take place last Jan. 25, the sixth anniversary of the military coup that overthrew President Milton Obote and brought Amin to power.

REPORTS OF the plot at the time created world headlines and protests because of the alleged involvement and subsequent death of Uganda's Anglican archbishop, the Rt. Rev. Janani Luwum.

After days of harassment by Amin's dreaded State Research Bureau, Luwum and two senior government ministers, Internal Affairs Minister Charles Oboth-Ofumbi and Water Minister William Oryema, were arrested.

Amin later announced all three had been killed accidentally in a traffic accident when they tried to overpower their military escort and the car in which they were riding crashed head-on into another vehicle.

Church authorities, however, said Luwum and the ministers had been murdered. The incident was denounced by President Carter and Western governments and the church demanded independent investigations into their deaths. Such an investigation has never been carried out.

RADIO UGANDA Monday said several of the accused named Oboth-Ofumbi as the brains behind the plot, which was conceived as far back as 1975.

The accused, according to the radio, said the scheme also included plans for an invading force from the so-called "Uganda Liberation Movement" to enter Uganda and attack the international airport on the shores of Lake Victoria.

The Uganda Liberation Movement is one of several exile groups.

Other reported targets to be hit in the confusion surrounding Amin's planned assassination would be the airbase at Gulu in the north, the general post office, the Uganda Broadcasting Corp. and parliament building in Kampala, the radio said.

Tito, Kim ask withdrawal of troops in Korea

TOKYO (UPI) — Yugoslav President Josif Broz Tito ended talks with North Korean leader Kim Il-sung Monday with a joint appeal for the withdrawal of all foreign troops from South Korea "at the earliest possible date," a North Korean news broadcast said.

Tito, 85, flies to China today for a nine-day visit. He came to Pyongyang from the Soviet Union, where he told Kremlin leaders good relations depended on strict noninterference in each other's affairs.

In Peking, residents were "filled with joy" at the prospect of his arrival and rehearsed songs and dances and made bouquets for an eleaborate welcoming ceremony, according to a Chinese news broadcast.

THE KOREAN Central News Agency, in a broadcast monitored in Tokyo, said Tito and Kim issued a joint communique "contending that all foreign troops stationed in South Korea, the major stumbling block to Korea's reunification, should withdraw at the earliest possible date."

The communique also said the two leaders in a week of talks exchanged "wide-ranging views" on ways to strengthen relations between their countries and reached "a unanimity of views on matters discussed."

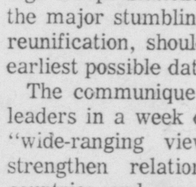

It said Tito's visit — his first to Pyongyang — contributed to the strengthening of relations between North Korea and Yugoslavia.

The New China News Agency said in a dispatch from Peking that people in the Chinese capital were preparing a "ceremonious welcome" for Tito.

THE BROADCAST, monitored in Hong Kong, said workers and students "have been busy making bouquets and huge streamers of welcome or rehearsing songs and dances for the occasion.

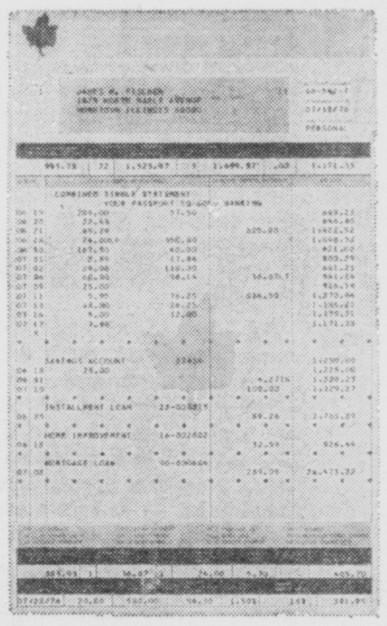

"Although China and Yugoslavia are thousands of miles apart, the people of the two countries have forged a profound friendship," the agency said.

Tito talked with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev on Aug. 18 and 19 in what the Kremlin called an "atmosphere of friendship and understanding."

Wheeling must be careful in hiring manager

The resignation of Wheeling Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle leaves the village with a major problem: How to attract a professional, qualified manager in light of the political pressure applied to Zerkle by Village Pres. William Hein and his majority on the board.

Although the trustees last week retracted a motion calling for his resignation and asked Zerkle to return to his job last week, there was no way to reestablish a relationship of trust.

The damage was done two weeks ago when the angry Hein faction asked for Zerkle's resignation because he objected to pressure from them to appoint a new police chief of their choosing. Zerkle rightly contended that the selection was his responsibility alone under the council-manager form of government which Wheeling adopted by referendum in 1969.

Only in the face of angry protests from village residents did the Hein faction recant and ask Zerkle to come back. By then, Zerkle was fed up with the political infighting and back room politics of Wheeling.

No decent, professional manager will take the Wheeling job unless it is completely separate from that sort of politics. Wheeling's board should set up a blue ribbon panel of citizens to begin a screening process for a new manager. The panel should be above politics and it should select a manager based on merit, not political expediency.

Selection of the panel should be nonpartisan. The political scraps that scar virtually every village board meeting should not enter into the picture here.

Wheeling desperately needs quality leadership in village hall. The village must not return to that time when business at village hall was conducted on the basis of personal favors and political advantage.

Fascinating medium TV flunks out as kids' teacher

We've always been fascinated with television.

Many of us can remember when they rolled the first one into our homes, and the way we used to peer through a haze of snowy white to see the images of characters on the round screen.

Well, if you listen to a special panel studying student Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, television has developed from this peculiarity into a monster that is a factor in pulling down the test scores of today's youngsters.

The 21-member panel said by age 16 most children have spent between 10,000 and 15,000 hours watching television, more time than they spent in school. They concluded that this detracts from homework, competes with schooling and generally has contributed to the decline in SAT scores.

Parents ought to think about the report.

For they're the ones who control the television set. And if it's not on, then the kids certainly won't become addicted to the programing.

Television remains a fascinating medium. And we all watch a lot of it.

But when it replaces the teacher of our children, then we've got problems. And apparently in some homes, it has.

Something sinister afoot in Canal treaty diplomacy

Paul Greenberg

The opening arguments in favor of a new Panama Canal treaty are about as clear as one would expect from a campaign designed to get the American public to approve a document sight unseen. The entrance of Henry Kissinger into this campaign, like a cameo appearance of Alfred Hitchcock in a movie, is the surest sign yet that something sinister is afoot. If Henry the K has emerged from the shadows, can diplomatic duplicity be far behind?

Sol Linowitz, who negotiated this mysterious treaty along with Ellsworth Bunker, assured one congressional committee that the technicians are working "around the clock, seven days a week" to complete it. Not only aren't Americans allowed to read the small print — it hasn't even been written yet. That is scarcely the most assuring way to construct a treaty that is going to be as foolproof as its backers claim. Ambassador Linowitz makes it sound like the biggest rush job since the Teton Dam, and it may prove as sound.

The administration's campaign for the new treaty is one in which soothing terms like Assuring the Neutrality of the Canal are used again and again, but not clearly defined. In any debate, that's the surest sign the speaker doesn't know exactly what he's talking about or, if he does, is afraid to say.

When Linowitz was asked at a congressional hearing just what neutrality meant in the context of this treaty, he declined to say, and even added that it would be "most unwise" to go into that now. Unwise for whom, one wonders — for those trying to zoom this treaty past the Senate with the speed of Bert Lance's confirmation, or for those who would like to know just what this treaty would mean before approving it?

A congressman from Kentucky, Carl Hubbard Jr., asked if the new treaty specifically would give the United States the right to intervene to protect the canal's neutrality, or would it simply not place any restrictions on American intervention and hope for the best? The difference could be legally crucial in a future crisis. Linowitz refused to discuss the subject, but he did drop an unsettling hint: "We will not use the word 'intervene.' I can guarantee you that." How else, one wonders, can the canal be protected in a showdown?

Sovereignty is another key term in this debate. Because the United States now exercises it over the canal, there can be no question of this country's legal right to protect the canal. If sovereignty is handed to Panama, as this treaty proposes, what is to prevent its present dictator or some future one from nationalizing the canal and doing with it as he sees fit, particularly if the United States cannot intervene.

Sol Linowitz's answer, or rather reply, is that speaking of the Panamanian dictator as a dictator is "not being helpful." Again one wonders: Not helpful to whom? A tendency toward euphemism is not assuring in drawing up any contract, including treaties.

And another question: The United States is to pay Panama a huge amount of money — variously estimated at between $40 million and $70 million a year — to take the canal off our hands. Where's the money to come from?

Presumably out of canal tolls collected under this treaty. But for the past few years the canal has been operating at a loss. Does this presage an extortionate leap in tolls?

Perhaps the most relevant question about ratifying the new treaty right now is: What's the rush? Cannot a month go by without the United States giving away something? Is it absolutely necessary that every American mission abroad return home bearing some Great Diplomatic Accomplishment, usually for the other side?

Cyrus Vance was pressed to come back from the Middle East with an attache case full of new positions. Now he's off to China and the pressure from the usual sources is on for him to come back without Taiwan. Of all peoples, surely the Chinese would understand the exercise of a little patience in these matters.

Why not practice some creative immobility for a change? Particularly if mobility has not ushered in much good of late. There may be a fine case for doing nothing when the alternative is giving away the Panama Canal, or selling out friends at the rate of one a month.

Henry Kissinger, still sounding as though he were hectoring some captive graduate seminar at Harvard, is quoted as saying of the new Panama Canal treaty: "Support for it is required by statesmanship, patriotism and wisdom." Surely not even Kissinger would claim a monopoly of all three of those virtues. (Two out of three, maybe.) Why not hear out the case for the treaty, or at least wait until it's written before letting Henry the K sweep us along one more time? Kissinger's tone recalls the way he used to talk about the glorious peace he was bringing to Southeast Asia — which is another thing that ought to give the Senate, and the nation, pause.

Senate mugs go way of razor strop

by DICK WEST
The Lighter Side

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Historians and archivists aren't sure exactly when the policy was adopted. But back at some point in time the U.S. Senate instituted a program of socialized shaving mugs.

Democrat and Republican alike, Northerner and Southerner, conservative and liberal, the Senators turned their backs on the traditional concept of private mug investment and became dependent on government-provided lather.

Each male Senator, upon his ascension to Capitol Hill, automatically became the recipient of a handsome gold-trimmed mug with his name inscribed thereon in gilded Gothic handlettering. And paid for with public funds.

IN WELFARE offices, such windfalls are called handouts. In labor contracts, they are called fringe benefits. In Congress, they are called perquisites.

By whatever name, they are hard to give up.

Senators hung onto the free mug boon long after the age of brushless shave cream had arrived and even into the spray foam era.

But this week, in an act of self-denial unmatched in modern times, they finally bit the bullet and voted to terminate the mug procurement program.

This does not mean that Senators of the future will be deprived of the opportunity to acquire a personalized senatorial shaving mug.

HEREAFTER, however, they must do so at their own expense. Namely, $33.75.

To their credit, it must be said that the Senators accepted this loss of perquisite without a whimper. One reason for the stoicism may have been that most Senators probably didn't know they had a free mug coming.

Although the mugs are housed in a dark wooden cabinet in the Senate barber shop, only a few are currently used. Maybe just one.

A source with good barber shop connections told me the long remaining mug-and-brush man is Sen. Herman Talmadge, the smooth-cheeked Georgia Democrat. That figures.

TALMADGE ALSO was the last of the Senate users of cuspidors — a vestige of the epoch when tobacco-chewers were as common as straight razors.

Most modern-day Senators, I was told, first learn of their shaving mug proprietorship when they retire from Congress, voluntarily or otherwise.

Usually what happens is that when the Sergeant-at-Arms comes up to bid the departing Senators Godspeed he says, "By the way, we've got a shaving mug for you."

Reaction among the Senators varies. Some fall to their knees in gratitude. Others seem to fall asleep.

Although buying their own mugs may be burdensome, there is some compensation. The extra expense can be cited to help justify the next congressional pay raise.

Present efforts fail

Health tests for children lacking

Martha Angle and Robert Walters
In Washington

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Two-thirds of the children of the nation's poorest parents have never seen a dentist, and about 60 per cent of those youngsters have chronic medical conditions that aren't being treated.

Compared with the children of more affluent families, the prevalence of heart disease among the poor is three times as great. Six times as many low-income youngsters have hearing impairments and five times as many have mental illness.

In theory, there is no more meritorious mission for this country's federal, state and local government health agencies than to identify the debilitating medical problems of impoverished youngsters and provide treatment at a cost their families can afford.

In practice, a federal law passed almost a decade ago mandated the operation of just such a program, known as Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment or EPSDT.

BUT LITTLE has been done to improve the lot of millions of sick and needy children because of a disgraceful record of insensitivity, incompetence and even hostility on the part of those who were supposed to administer EPSDT.

Although the law requiring the joint federal-state program became effective in January 1968, it gave the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare 18 months to draft the necessary regulations and explain to the states the addition of EPSDT to the Medicaid program.

When the target date of July 1, 1969, arrived, however, virtually nothing had been done. In fact, it wasn't until early 1972 — more than four years after the law was passed and two and one-half years after the program was supposed to be operating — that HEW's regulations finally took effect.

The potential of the program probably was best described by then-HEW Sec. Caspar Weinberger, when he cited EPSDT's few successes in 1974:

"We found children whose rotting teeth had abscessed gums and were pouring poisons into their systems. Dentists treated them . . . We found children who saw the writing on the blackboard as a blur. They were fitted with glasses."

BUT THE CHILDREN'S Defense Fund, a nonprofit Washington organization, has just completed a comprehensive study that concludes that only a quarter of the needed health screenings are being conducted on the approximately 13 million children eligible for assistance.

Among those who are screened, an inadequate follow-up system results in treatment for only slightly more than half of the cases of anemia, lead poisoning, parasite infections, respiratory ailments and host of other major medical problems.

The study identifies numerous other EPSDT failures, including inability to link children with sources of continuing health care and the virtual refusal to deal with developmental problems such as speech impairments, learning disabilities and emotional disturbances.

CRITICIZED IN the report are not only the foot-dragging federal bureaucrats but also the state health administrators who never have been enthusiastic about the program as well as the city and county health officials who have brought neither inspiration nor dedication to EPSDT at the local level.

Several months ago, President Jimmy Carter unveiled a package of reforms designed to improve the entire undertaking and rename it the Child Health Assessment Program. Congress will begin considering that package next month.

But Wendy Lazarus, director of the Children's Defense Fund study, believes that although Carter's proposal "includes some very important provisions and improves the lot of many kids, it only goes 60 per cent of the way toward what's needed."

The time has come to abandon such half-measures and fulfill the special promise of this program: To give the children of the poor the chance to compete — without the handicap of an unnecessary medical disability — for the best our society can offer in education, employment and self-advancement.

Small businessman fights OSHA over Fourth Amendment rights

Tom Tiede

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — For two decades Bruce Hertzler had operated his small business in peace, even in obscurity, bothering and being bothered by no one. Then one day some men from the government visited; they said they represented the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and demanded entry for an inspection.

Hertzler was not unfamiliar with the insistent ways of the bureaucracy. His industry (the manufacture of paper boxes and small arms ammunition) was duly licensed by the government, and as a regulated businessman he had often submitted to resulting red tape, pesky paperwork, records disclosure, and even inspections.

YET THE MEN from OSHA had about them an arrogance that seemed to Hertzler a step beyond an acceptable attitude. Also, their requirements seemed to transcend routine bureaucratic policework. Not only did the men want to inspect Hertzler's factory, they said they intended to enter his home as well, to see if the residence was in good order.

The government men said their request to enter the home was perfectly legal. Hertzler had a refrigerator there, in which the five employes of his nearby plant often kept their lunches; therefore the home was technically an extension of the factory and had to meet the industrial health and safety standards established by OSHA.

Indeed, the men had the full weight of federal law on their side. Public Law 91-596, dating from 1970, authorizes OSHA representatives: "To enter without delay and at reasonable times any factory, plant, establishment, construction site, or other area, workplace or environment where work is performed by an employee of an employer."

HERTZLER WAS confused. "Enter my home?" How did Public Law 91-596 square with his right to privacy? He recalled that the Fourth Amendment guarantees "the right of people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects." (When he asked about the Constitution, Hertzler says one OSHA man replied: "I don't give a damn about it.")

Hertzler did not debate the matter for long. He believed he was being abused and so he denied the government men entrance to his home and told them to get off his property. They warned that he was breaking the law, and they had ways to force him to comply, but Hertzler, angry now, said he never would change his decision.

No doubt that decision was a risky one. In seven years of controversial existence, OSHA seldom has been patient with stubborn businessmen. Some factory owners who have failed to cooperate with inspectors have been forced out of business through fine or harassment; others have gone deeply into debt fighting the powerful agency.

BUT HERTZLER WAS convinced he was right. And with the backing of his five employes he set about to see his decision through to the end. OSHA representatives returned to Hertzler's property twice more, once armed with a search warrant, but neither he nor his employes were intimidated; finally, OSHA took the argument to federal court.

The escalating trouble was costly for Hertzler. Worried and involved, he was forced to slow down his plant operation (thereby idling the employes that ironically, OSHA is supposed to protect). Then there were the lawyers, costing an additional $3,000. As for time loss, Hertzler spent long months preparing his defense.

Eventually, the court found in favor of the defendant. A three judge panel determined that the government did not have sufficient reason to enter Hertzler's home or his factory; then it voided the OSHA warrant and issued a permanent injunction against future demands by inspectors of the safety and health administration.

Alas, the verdict didn't end the saga. And after two years of battling, Bruce Hertzler is still entangled with a bureaucracy that is at least as recalcitrant as he. OSHA appealed the three judge ruling, and the litigation now drones on with considerable confusion in the federal judiciary. Final resolution is nowhere in sight.

MEANWHILE, HERTZLER is worried that OSHA may apply other pressures. Recently the Labor Dept. stopped by to go over his payroll records, and Hertzler wonders if a multi-agency torment is about to begin. If so, it could be serious for the manufacturer; some of his business depends on orders from federal bureaus.

Even so, Hertzler says he will not give in. "The principle is too important." He says it is one thing for the government to barge into a business. But a home? Hertzler fears this means that anyone who has work done in his residence, perhaps even the installation of a simple rug, may be subject to OSHA regulations.

"I'm not paranoid about this kind of thing," Hertzler says, "but I think the Fourth Amendment is clear. It says unreasonable search is not permitted. I don't like to be the one to put his head on the block, but somebody has to do something. Either we're going to use the Constitution or we're going to lose it. Which do we want?"

Facts ignored in Miner case

The decision is made and Miner Junior High will close. My only regret is that all the hard work done by those who wanted to save Miner seemed to fall on deaf ears. Ever since Roosevelt University expressed interest in Miner the burden of convincing the board not to close Miner fell to the area residents. All the facts we could show them about safety, traffic, rentability and saleability seemed to have been ignored. The Thomas residents only had to say they had a better facility and the board agreed.

The school board has the Booz Allen report as a guideline. They followed it in closing North and Wilson. However, when it came to the junior high issue they chose not to follow the advice of the same unbiased professional company which said Thomas or South should close.

They choose a newer building, a nature court, a tiered music room, an extra room and a stage as a teaching area for physical education over a building that is in a campus situation with adjacent grade school, has extra locker rooms, a cafeteria that doubles as teaching station for physical education, a nicer library, an attractive courtyard that aids in traffic flow, and is brighter and more cheerful.

I feel the board did an injustice to the community in not voting to close Miner in May when they made up their minds, saving us all the time spent trying to show them why it was wrong. Maybe the fault lies with the residents for not electing more school board members from their area. The board members say it does not affect their views but the vote and discussions proved different.

Court action not ruled out in Barker case

by TONI GINNETTI

A report declaring an accused 16-year-old murderer incompetent to stand trial will not necessarily rule out court action against the youth.

Dr. Robert Bussell, Cook County director of clinical services, has said in a report that James E. Barker Jr. is mentally unfit to stand trial. The report could mean authorities will forego a trial against the Mount Prospect youth accused of killing a Prospect Heights man Aug. 9 in a shooting spree at Just Games Inc. in Mount Prospect.

But if the incompetency ruling is accepted by court authorities, the youth could be remanded to the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health to be held until a time when he could stand trial.

A FINDING OF innocence in such a case in the past meant the courts no longer held jurisdiction over a defendant if the department subsequently declared a defendant sane and authorized his release.

That was the case in 1974 when the department freed Elaine Edfors, the Rolling Meadows woman who in 1973 was declared innocent by reason of insanity of the murders of her two young daughters.

But a new law passed only four weeks ago now provides that persons under the care of the Mental Health Department who have been involved in criminal cases cannot be released without court notification and a hearing.

The law was enacted following the murder three months ago of an Oak Park woman killed by a former mental patient with a criminal record.

BARKER FACES a hearing Sept. 13 to decide if the report on his competency will be accepted.

The youth is accused of murdering Otto Meisenheimer, 21, of 107 E. Camp McDonald Rd., and injuring four others in the shooting spree.

That kind of decision would be in line with procedures often followed in cases involving the criminally insane.

Incompetency rulings usually arise when a defendant is unable to aid in his own defense or to understand the criminal proceedings he faces.

AT LEAST TWO such cases involving Northwest suburban men are pending, one involving Joseph P. Dacy, accused of murdering a Schaumburg woman last year, and the other involving Richard J. Barham of Des Plaines, accused of a string of burglaries in Des Plaines.

Both men are being held in the state's facility for the criminally insane in Chester, Ill. Should they at some date be declared sane, they would be remanded to the courts to stand trial.

The procedure is one of two often associated with trials involving insanity pleas. In the other procedure, a defendant can offer a plea of innocence by reason of insanity, usually followed by court-ordered referral to the Dept. of Mental Health.

FBI joins police hunt for Michigan convict

ANTIGO, Wis. (UPI)— Witnesses confirmed Monday they saw an escaped Michigan prison farm worker and his woman hostage at a northern Wisconsin resort cabin, prompting the FBI to take control of the five-day-old case.

Since Thursday, the hunt for Douglas Henry, 22, of Lansing, Mich., and his hostage, Evelyn VanTassel, 58, of Marquette, Mich., had centered in Michigan's upper Peninsula.

The FBI, which had been assisting Michigan authorities, took charge of the search because the suspect reportedly has crossed a state line.

IN A NATIONWIDE bulletin, Henry was described as armed and dangerous. His stepfather, Ralph D. Henry of Lansing, said the convict was "a regular wild man" capable of extreme violence if provoked.

Lee Pendleton of Lilly said he confronted Henry Sunday at Pendleton's small log cabin west of Lilly in Langlade County. Pendleton's description of the unarmed man matched that of Henry, but he did not see the woman.

After viewing mugshots, two other campers identified the cabin's occupants as the convict and Mrs. VanTassel, wife of a retired Northern Michigan University vice president.

Langlade County Sheriff Roland Combs said deputies missed capturing Henry after Pendleton asked for help in evicting trespassers without realizing they were the object of an intensive two-state search.

"THEY WERE preparing something to eat just before we got there," Combs said. "The food was still warm, but they were gone."

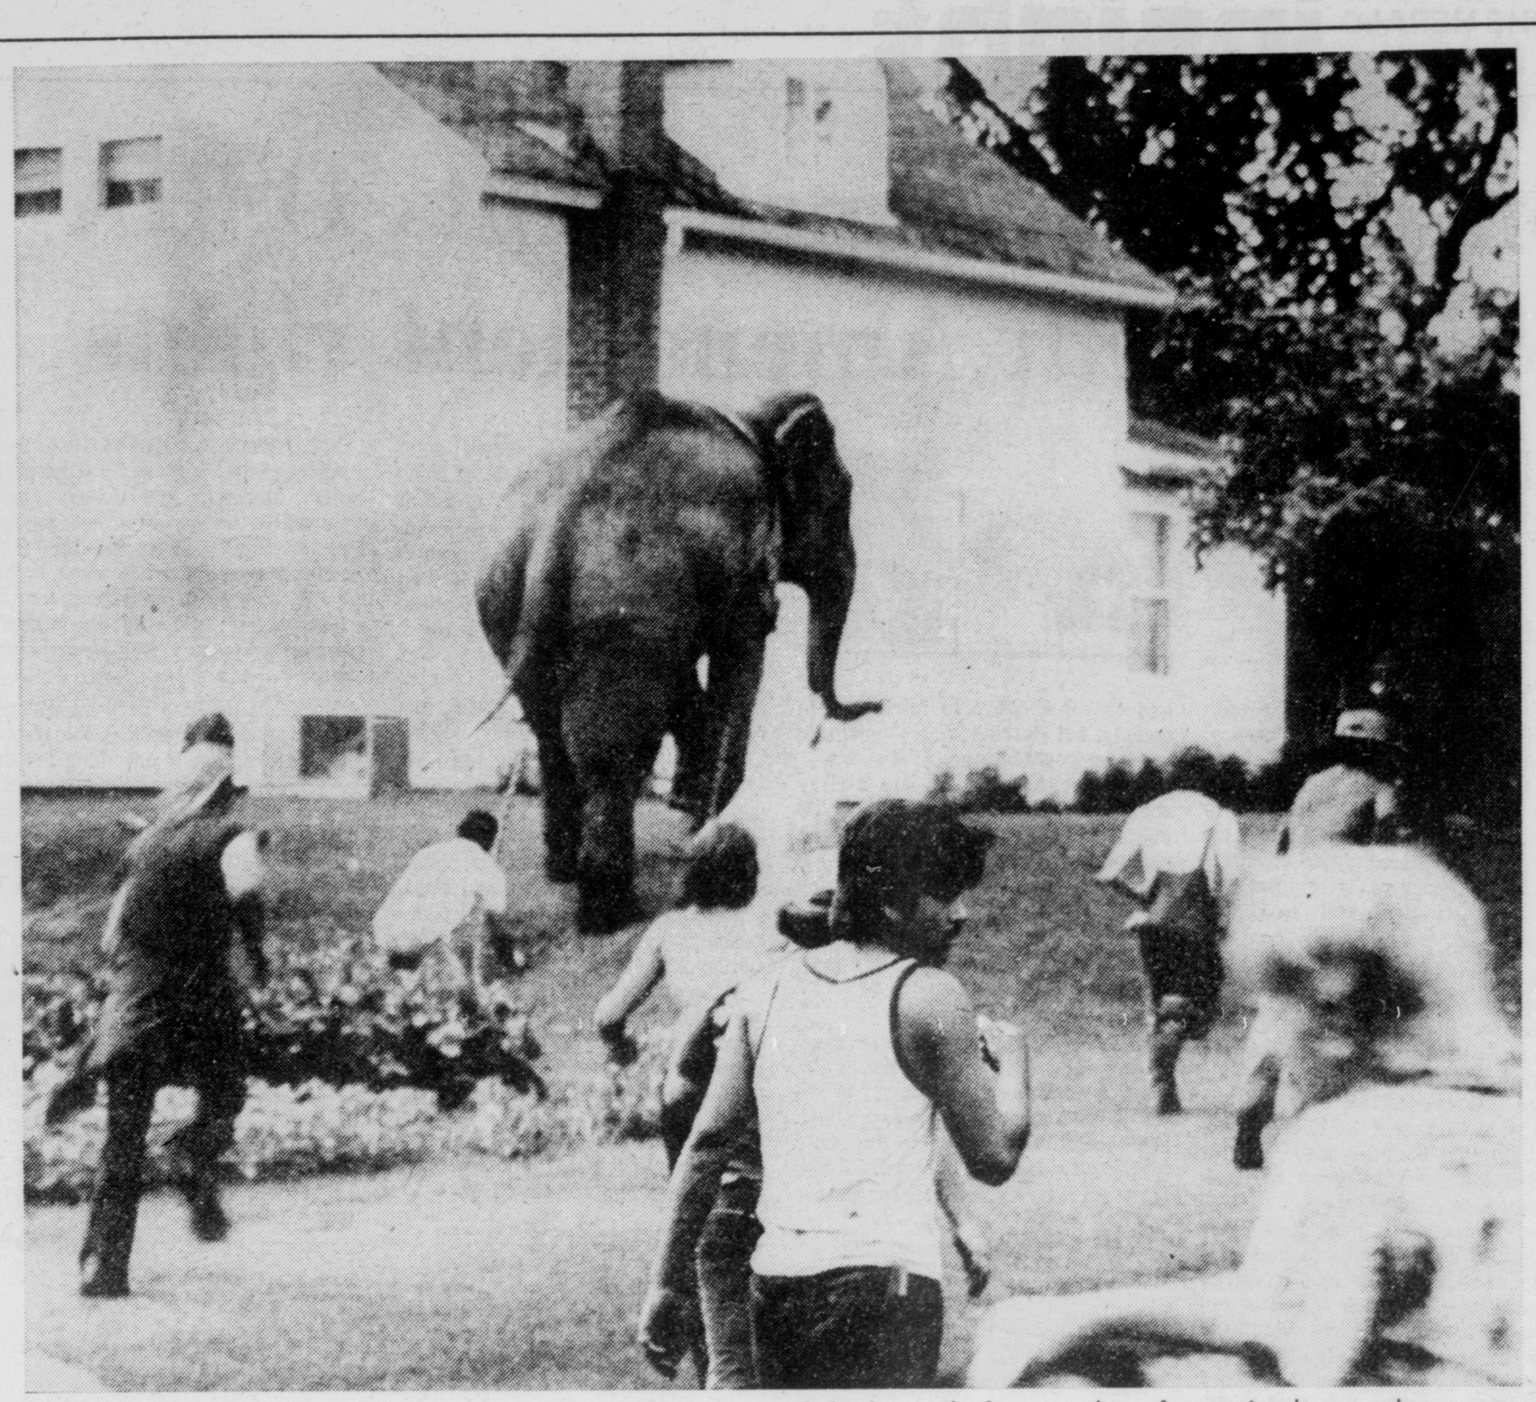

Another source said the two campers indicated Mrs. VanTassel looked ok despite four days of captivity.

In Negaunee, Mich., State Police Sgt. Daryl Prudom said the discovery was the first encouraging development since the woman was abducted at knifepoint and her husband Leo, 65, was tied to a tree at their cabin near Marquette Thursday.

THE COUPLE apparently walked in on Henry, who was using their cottage as a hideout. He escaped a week ago from the Marquette State Prison Magnum honor farm, where he was serving 6 to 15 years for breaking and entering.

"If he didn't disappear during the night," Prudom said, "we're closing in. We hope he sticks to his formula of breaking into cabins. He'd be easier to find that way."

While Wisconsin agencies searched a 15-mile radius around Lilly, Michigan law enforcement officers aided by a state police helicopter concentrated on the border counties of Dickinson and Menominee. All eight bridges connecting the two states were blockaded.

BARBARA, A four-ton African circus elephant broke loose from the Carson and Barnes Five Ring Circus and went on a rampage in Prairie du Sac, Wis. The elephant, leaving behind a trail of damage, was spooked when a pole fell behind her. She broke through a window of a nursing home and was eventually caught, following a four-mile chase, in a corn field.

Elephant with a mind of its own

PRAIRIE DU SAC, Wis. (UPI) — Barbara the elephant is the Harry Houdini of the animal world, a gentle but nervous beast who likes to be by herself from time to time.

She escaped her circus handlers in Arkansas last year. She got away in Wisconsin last month. She did it again this weekend when she fled her handlers and darted right through a nursing home, passing startled residents.

In October 1976 a truck carrying her near Russellville, Ark., overturned. She was standing by peaceably until a passing car backfired. That spooked Barbara and she lumbered off.

WORKERS FOR THE Carson and Barnes Five Ring Circus and volunteers searched for her for several days until a passing motorist spotted her standing off the highway grazing quietly with some friendly cattle and called police. Her handlers picked her up with no problems.

Barbara, who is 38 years old, made headlines again last month in Fond du Lac after escaping from her trainer. The four-ton African elephant was finally caught in a cornfield.

But Sunday she really had a busy day.

She was helping hoist the main circus tent when a pole rattled to the ground behind her. She was off again.

SHE JOGGED through the nursing home, several backyards and back to a cornfield again before she was apprehended by a circus worker an hour and a half later.

There were no injuries.

But Tillie Norton, 71, a resident of the Maplewood Nursing Home, was having her lunch in bed when Barbara went by.

"I thought I was surely going mad," she said. "Did I really see an elephant?"

Barbara broke a window in the physical therapy unit before forcing her way out a door. "Everyone was chasing her — it made it worse," said circus manager D. R. Miller.

The circus arrived earlier Sunday from Chicago and after a one night stand moved on to Prairie du Chien.

Society murder case on low-key

AMARILLO, Tex. (UPI) — Flamboyant Hosston attorney Richard (Racehorse) Haynes brought his dramatic cross-examination of Fort Worth socialite Priscilla Davis to an end Monday with a day of surprisingly low-key questioning.

Haynes began his cross-examination of the state's star witness against millionaire industrialist T. Cullen Davis last week with rapid-fire questioning about her love life and drug use.

But on Monday, Haynes led her tediously through the details of the night she said Davis killed two persons and wounded two others at her fashionable Fort Worth mansion.

THE ONLY drama of the day came indirectly from the defense attorneys.

They confirmed a newspaper report they had documented proof Mrs. Davis knew beforehand the shootings would occur and the target would be her lover, Stan Farr.

Attorney Phil Burelson said the defense had "more than one" signed affidavit confirming their story, but he refused to elaborate.

Mrs. Davis has been the prosecution's star witness against her husband, identifying him as the man who wounded her and then killed Farr at her $6 million Fort Worth mansion the night of Aug. 2, 1976. Moments before Davis attacked them, Mrs. Davis said, she and Farr had found bloody fingerprints leading to the basement where the body of Mrs. Davis' stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12, was found.

The document concerning Mrs. Davis came to light when a Fort Worth Star Telegram reporter read a paper lying in front of Haynes on the defense table. He reported the document said that whoever did the shooting would kill only Farr and that Mrs. Davis knew the attack would occur. The alleged assailant was not named.

HAYNES SAID he covered the paper when he noticed the reporter reading it and, at first, denied the story. But then he confirmed that the document said Priscilla Davis had advance knowledge and that Farr was the only intended victim.

"It's a hard thing to prove," Haynes said.

"I wouldn't dignify it (the report) as being very accurate," said Tarrant County Dist. Atty. Jim Curry.

In testimony Monday, Mrs. Davis continued her explanation of her relationship with W. T. Rufner, a Fort Worth man she started dating in August, 1974, just after she filed for divorce from Davis.

THE DEFENSE has tried to show that Rufner was a violent person, and Mrs. Davis described another incident supporting that.

She said in May 1975 she and Rufner drove into the parking lot of a Fort Worth bar, and just as she stopped her luxury automobile, Rufner thrust it into reverse and pushed down on the accelerator, damaging the transmission. Mrs. Davis said she went into the nightclub, without Rufner, and when she returned all of the tires were flat.

Friends took Mrs. Davis home where she found Rufner sitting on a kitchen cabinet.

"I told him to just get out," she said. "I didn't have anything more to say to him."

Berkowitz sanity report today

NEW YORK (UPI) — David Berkowitz, accused of being the "Son of Sam" killer, ventures outside his hospital cell ward for the first time in two weeks today to attend a hearing where a report on his mental competency will be unsealed.

The postal worker charged with the .44-caliber killings of six people was ordered to be present in state Supreme Court when the report — compiled by psychiatrists who have studied him since his arrest — is opened.

Berkowitz has been held in a special ward of Kings County Hospital since Aug. 16, when he was arraigned in Brooklyn on the first of six murder counts.

TWO SUBSEQUENT arraignments have been held in a bulletproof chamber 50 feet from Berkowitz's guarded cell to avoid the danger of transporting him.

The report, contained in a 10-by-14 inch manila envelope, was personally delivered Monday to Supreme Court Justice Gerald Held by Dr. Daniel Schwartz, head of the forensic medical section at the hospital.

Schwartz, who has spoken almost daily to Berkowitz since he was remanded to the hospital, sat unobtrusively in Held's courtroom for three hours Monday until the court calendar was cleared, then approached the bench and handed over the report to Held, who will make the decision on whether Berkowitz is fit to stand trial.

"This doesn't weigh any 10 pounds like I thought it would," Held said.

"IT'S THE MOST difficult work I've ever had," Schwartz replied. "Im glad it's over."

Held and Administrative Justice Charles Ruben took custody of the report and sealed it to make sure it would not be tampered with before the hearing at 9:30 a.m. today.

Defense attorney Mark Heller already has said that if Berkowitz is found competent to be tried, he will advance a defense of insanity.

Similar reports on Berkowitz' mental condition will be distributed to district attorneys in the Bronx and Queens, where he is charged with a total of five "Son of Sam" murders.

U.S. vows to help halt spread of deserts

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — The United States Monday called the spread of deserts around the globe one of "the serious problems of our age" and pledged an all-out effort to halt it.

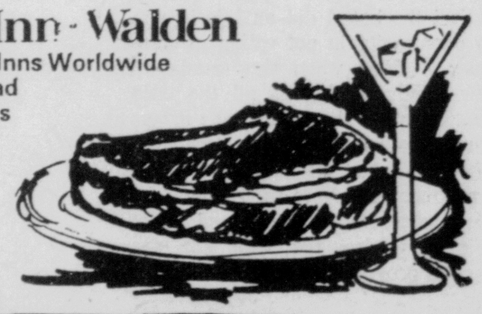

"The United States will do its utmost to support a long-term effective world effort to protect the earth's natural resources," President Carter said in a message read at the opening session of the U.N. Conference on Desertification.

Some 1,500 representatives from about 100 countries are taking part in the 12-day meeting to explore ways to slow the loss of arable land to deserts that already cover an estimated one-third of the Earth's land surface.

"One of the serious problems of our age is the accelerating spread of deserts and desert-like conditions, with the resulting malnutrition and human poverty," Carter told the delegates.

"Since desertification is a worldwide phenomenon — my own country is even now experiencing one of the worst droughts in its history — the United Nations has appropriately taken the lead in examining it," he said.

Delegates taking part in the mostly technical discussions at the meeting are hoping to draw up what they call a "plan of action to combat desertification," a process destroying about 14 million acres of productive land every year.

Financial execs move into films as Hollywood heads to diversity

by ARTHUR GARCIA

Hollywood isn't grinding out movies the way it did in the old days — in the 1940s and early '50s — when production and plots were simpler. Back then, sound stages and back lots were crowded with production crews pumping out features to round out double-bills and Saturday matinee schedules, and the local theater changed its marquee weekly.

Nowadays, Hollywood produces fewer films that run longer, some of them for months at selected theaters before general release. The world's movie capital isn't even turning out as many films as it did five years ago.

Last year, for example, the number of pictures distributed by major U.S. companies declined to 127, down from 142 the year before and 193 in 1972.

BUT, SAYS Grant Hobson, analyst with Loeb, Rhoades & Company, "The motion picture industry seldom has presented more interesting long-term prospects to the investment community than have developed in recent years." In a 30-page report on the industry he also cautions that many of the speculative aspects of the business remain and prudent investors should tread carefully in picking among these stocks.

What can be particularly misleading for the careless investor are headlines telling of runaway successes such as the current movies "Star Wars" and "The Deep." Also the heavy promotion and merchandising accompanying box office winners, and even some losers, can be deceptive.

Although Hollywood's output has shrunk, one thing that hasn't lessened is the "hype" or "ballyhoo" associated with moviemaking. If anything, merchandising has become more sophisticated, with movie audiences being presented with T-shirts, posters, pennants, records, and even books based on movie scripts, instead of the other way around.

Analysts are advising investors to be wary of choosing motion picture stocks on the basis of press agentry or box office bonanzas for current films. "Not only is the predictability of such success impossible — when and if it does come — but also these stocks have a habit of losing market support if there is not something bigger on the horizon," says Hobson.

"THERE ARE MANY pitfalls in buying a stock on the strength of a single picture," says Peter Enderlin of Merrill Lynch. Different release patterns distort comparisons with other pictures, he says.

"Second, the sustainability of box office strength is very difficult to predict, even for those pictures that open strongly," he says. "Third, very complicated deals, varying costs and varying revenue and profit participations make it extremely difficult to calculate the profit contribution from a given movie."

Wall Street, in fact, prefers what now are called entertainment companies to studios whose operations are too closely tied to the success of movies. "The greater the profit contribution from an individual movie, the greater the company's difficulty in finding an encore, another hit to replace it," says Enderlin.

"I see the trend in the industry being toward diversification, reducing the heavy dependence on motion pictures," says Dennis Forst, analyst with Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards, a regional brokerage firm in Los Angeles. "All the companies are going through a big metamorphosis and becoming more rounded entertainment companies, trying to emulate MCA."

MCA, INC., is a model of the modern entertainment company. Among its major attractions are its highly regarded management with what Hobson of Loeb, Rhoades calls a record of "studied conservatism." He says MCA has one of the strongest financial positions in the business and a fairly predictable and controllable earnings base in TV production as the largest supplier of network programming.

The company also has written the script for Hollywood diversification, involving itself in recent years in records, publishing (G. P. Putnam), retailing, and even a savings and loan assocation.

"Movie stocks" really is a misnomer, suggests Merrill Lynch's Enderlin, since none of the companies is solely in that business. "The movie business can be a good area if it's successfully integrated with other entertainment businesses, as Walt Disney Productions, MCA, and Warner Communications have done," he says.

Some analysts worry about a shortage of suitable properties for the diversification they favor and look carefully at depth of management and financial controls. In fact, one of the big changes in today's Hollywood is the management picture.

"The companies more and more are run by businessmen. There are almost no moguls left, if any," says Forst. "Darryl Zanuck was running Twentieth Century-Fox until four or five years ago but now the motion picture companies are all headed by financial types, accountants and attorneys."

The result is that all the major film companies today are operating in the black, largely because of the new breed of button-down executives directing them.

Job rate, inflation seen to bring doubt

A leading industrialist told the Southern Governor's Conference in San Antonio, Tex., Monday problems with the nation's economy have provoked uneasiness and skepticism among Americans plagued by unemployment and inflation. Irving S. Shapiro, chairman and chief executive officer of E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co., said American citizens recognize the economic problems. "We feel it in our purse and in our gut — when it comes to gut instincts, the American majority is almost infallible. Common sense tells us that the economy is not working right," Shapiro said in a speech to the opening business session of the annual meeting of governors of 17 Southern states and Puerto Rico. He said the economy remains basically sound, "but it is not working as well as it used to, nor as well as it should." Shapiro listed inflation, 7 per cent unemployment, a sluggish rate of capital investment and a low rate of fixed business investments as indicators of economic problems.

Ford discredits Pintos' danger

Allegations that Ford Pintos have faulty fuel tanks that make them firetraps and cause the death of 70 or more persons each year are pure exaggerations, the automaker said Monday. In an eight-page statement nearly a month after a highly publicized news conference held by the magazine Mother Jones, Ford said evidence "totally discredits the opinions of the alleged safety experts quoted by Mother Jones." Herbert L. Misch, Ford vice president in charge of the environmental and safety engineering staff, said, "These statistics establish that the Ford Pinto is involved in fewer fire-associated collisions than might be expected considering the total number of Pintos in operation."

'Energy plan hurts production'

President Carter's emphasis on conservation of energy at the expense of more production shows a no-growth attitude that will hurt the middle income taxpayer, Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., said Monday. "The policy is a caricature," Danforth said. "It magnifies one solution to the problem — conservation — and de-emphasizes the other part — production. Conservation isn't going to do the job all by itself." Danforth, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, which will have hearings on the energy proposals when Congress reconvenes next week, said Carter "deserves an A-plus for flagging the issue." Danforth urged deregulation of old oil and new gas with a requirement that any windfall profits be reinvested to produce more energy.

Civil service raise may get OK

President Carter is inclined to accept a recommendation for a 7.05 per cent pay increase Oct. 4 for most of the nation's federal workers, Civil Service Commission chairman Alan Campbell said Monday. The proposal provides for upward "adjustments" in the military pay scale, Campbell said, but would not provide raises for top-level government executives such as cabinet members. Carter met with the so-called "pay agent" — an advisory group including Budget Director Bert Lance, Labor Sec. Ray Marshall and Campbell — which unanimously recommended the pay raise on the basis of comparability with private industry.

Audit ordered on Harvard grants

U.S. officials are beginning a massive audit of federal grants received by Harvard University, apparently the largest investigation at the school in recent memory, the Christian Science Monitor reported Monday. The newspaper reported five Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare auditors are probing financial data on the university's $75 million to $80 million in annual HEW grants, starting with the School of Public Health. HEW officials deny the audit, which they say could take a year, is related to the case of a recently dismissed faculty member at the public health school, Phil Cohen, who accused the university of mishandling government funds.

Wheat cost down; bread price up

Americans are paying more for bread than they did a year ago even though the price of the wheat in it has fallen 41.5 per cent, an agriculture department report showed. The report said the value of wheat in a typical one-pound loaf of white bread in July was 2.4 cents. A year ago, it was 1.7 cents more. When other ingredients are added, the value of all farm products was down 1.9 cents, or nearly 32 per cent, from 1976. Somewhere between the wheat farmer and the supermarket, that 1.9 cent a loaf decline became a price increase. The average retail price of white bread rose from 35.4 cents a loaf in July, 1976 to 35.6 cents last month.

Closed-end funds—a rose is a ...

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — If William Shakespeare were around today, he would find plenty of good material in the modern world of Wall Street — although he might have a little trouble at first deciding whether what he had come up with was a tragedy or a farce.

Much of it might seem awfully familiar to old Will, such as the stock market's performance over the last year and a half ("To be or not to be") or the lessons of Bert Lance's forays into high finance ("Neither a borrower, nor a lender be.")

But Shakespeare also might be intrigued by the glaring failure of one group of allegedly sophisticated Wall Streeters to comprehend the message he set out nearly 400 years ago in Romeo and Juliet, to wit, "What's in a name?"

The group is the operator and merchandiser of one of the financial community's numerous out-of-favor products: the closed-end funds. Such funds are traded as common stocks, often on the major exchanges. They differ from ordinary "open-end" mutual funds in that the number of shares is limited and nobody guarantees you will get what their assets are worth on the day you sell. You get what the market will pay. Lately, that has been discouragingly little; 28 of 30 major closed-end funds have been selling at significant discounts from what their stock holdings were worth.

TO SOME investors, closed-end funds seemed a juicy opportunity: unlike mutual funds sold through brokers, which carry a sales charge or "load," or even mutual funds sold directly by their administrators, on a "no-load" basis, these discounted closed-end funds offered a route for acquiring a diversified stock portfolio at a "negative load" — that is, at less than it would cost you to buy the stocks yourself.

Such a course provided both a promise and a pitfall. The promise was the knowledge that, historically, discounts frequently change, sometimes to premiums. Thus, in a cheerier stock-market environment, the holder of closed-end funds might profit even more dramatically than a conventional stockholder. The pitfall was the realization that today's 15 per cent discount might be tomorrow's 20 per cent discount, and that discounts lately have been unusually large and long-lasting.

In a rather typical example of current Wall Street thinking, the closed-end fund crowd decided to meet this problem not by changing the fundamentals but by changing the cosmetics.

In one fell (and foolish) swoop, they officially changed their name from the Assn. of Closed-End Investment Companies to the Assn. of Publicly Traded Investment Funds. They aren't closed-end funds any more. They're publicly traded funds, and if that doesn't seem to make one iota's worth of difference to you, why shame on you.

There's no question closed-end funds have been running scared. Two of the oldest and biggest, Lehman and Tri-Continental, have had to resist shareholder pressure to switch to the more conventional open-end form and sell new shares without limit.

OTHERS HAVE been frightened by the prospect of unfriendly takeovers by outsiders who smelled a bargain in these heavily discounted stock portfolios. But not even all of the closed-end managers themselves believe changing their name is going to change their luck.

"I do not think the change of name is going to perform any feat of magic in eliminating discounts," says Bancroft G. Davis, chairman of Bancroft Convertible Fund, which recently was selling at about 20 per cent less than the value of its holdings.

Davis, a 22-year closed-end veteran, is convinced discounts will disappear only when long-term capital gains again are being regularly produced and distributed — in other words, when it is clear that a major bull market is under way.

In the 1960s, successful closed-end funds often sold at huge premiums over their net asset values.

"I, like everyone else, would like to see an extended bull market and the elimination of discounts," Davis says. "However, I am not persuaded that a generic change of name will be responsible."

Shakespeare, for one, certainly would buy that.

Dow scores best gain since July

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, aided by blue-chip bargain hunters, scored its best gain in more than a month Monday. But the trading pace was the second slowest of the year.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which gained 1.30 points Friday, climbed 8.67 points to 864.09, the best gain since it jumped the same amount on July 19. The closely watched average fell 8.06 points over-all last week.

Noting the Dow average had fallen 70 points in the past month, observers said a rally was overdue. The closely watched Dow average is off about 150 points for the year.

Some investors apparently were encouraged by reports that the Federal Reserve Board had apparently eased credit tightening policies.

However, after the market closed, the FED announced it was raising the discount rate it charges for member bank borrowing by half a percentage point to 5¾ per cent.

The big board volume of 15,280,000 shares, down from the 18,480,000 traded Friday, was the slowest turnover since 15,229,380 shares changed hands May 9, and indicated the rally lacked conviction.

Many investors remained concerned about the economy slowing despite a report that Carter Administration economists were optimistic about growth through the end of this year.

Observers were waiting for the Commerce Dept. report today on its index of leading indicators. The index fell the previous two months, confirming a slowdown.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index rose 0.44 to 53.04 and the average price of a share jumped 25 cents.

Advances topped declines, 1,004 to 398, among the 1,866 issues crossing the composite tape.

Composite volume of NYSE issues traded on all U.S. exchanges and over-the-counter totaled 18,284,870 shares, compared with 21,585,370 Friday.

The Groen Division of Dover Corp. has purchased a one-story, $315,000 building in Elk Grove Village as part of an industrial expansion, said a spokesman for Bennett & Kahnweiler Associates.

The realty firm, which was broker in the transaction, reported the sale of the 20,000-square-foot building at 2375 Pratt Blvd. The corporation, of 1900 E. Pratt Blvd., Elk Grove Village, was one of the original occupants in the Centex Industrial Park in 1957, the realty spokesman said.

'Spider lady' gets real joy from her creepy crawlers

POWHATAN, Va. (UPI) — When winter winds sweep across the Virginia Piedmont and the nights grow bitter cold, Ann Moreton switches on her electric blanket and fills her bed with tarantulas and scorpions. Then she grabs a coat and heads for her sister's house to sleep.

Come springtime, when Mrs. Moreton's tropical arachnids emerge from their dormant state, they go on display in her Spider Museum, the delight of neighborhood school children.

"My joy is introducing spiders to children before they are too old to be afraid of them," said the 67-year-old grandmother whose fame has spread from coast to coast as "The Spider Lady."

Every visitor to the museum — there were 10,000 last year — is offered the opportunity to stick out his hand and hold Linda, a large, tame Mexican tarantula with fangs as sharp as ice picks.

FOR THOSE WHO breathlessly watched a cold sweat form on Sean Connery's forehead as a hairy black tarantula crept over his chest in a James Bond movie thriller, it's disappointing to learn that the big arachnid's bite is no worse than a hornet sting.

At least, that's what Mrs. Moreton said it felt like the only time she was ever bitten.

The bite, came without warning, she said. An animal she'd been handling for three years shed its skin and became aggressive. But "I didn't know it. I picked it up and it bit me."

Before she became interested in spiders and founded the 1,000 member National Arachnid Society, Mrs. Moretoni said she, too, was afraid of them.

"I didn't know what I'd do if one got on me. Finally, one did, on my leg. I let out a big scream," she laughed.

But Mrs. Moreton cautions that "people who go out und work in the garden without gloves are crazy. Wherever you have crickets, you have black widows."

BLACK WIDOW spiders are plentiful, very quick and their bite "will make you real sick," she said.

A black widow, two scorpions and about a dozen tarantulas are the feature attractions at the 125-year-old renovated whitewashed stone grist mill that became the first live spider museum in the world when it opened four years ago.

This season, Mrs. Moreton is lamenting the death of an old friend, a poisonous brown recluse spider.

"I think it probably died of old age. I had it for two and a half years. They say a year is the average life span of most spiders."

Tarantulas may live 25 to 30 years, she said.

Visitors to the Spider Museum also learn that:

• Baby tarantulas are the only infant spiders that don't balloon, or waft away to new habitats on sails of silk.

• Spiders are cannibals. They eat their own kind. Male spiders have longer legs so they can make a fast getaway after mating with hungry females.

• A spider courtship begins when a male twangs on a silken strand of a female's web and she twangs back, signaling he is invited into the web.

• Spiders are fragile, often breaking one of their eight legs. But they have the ability to grow a new leg as many as nine times.

• Baby wolf spiders are the only oes too weak to chew their way out of the egg sac, so their mothers have to do it for them.

• Crab spiders can change color to either white or yellow to blend with their environment.

Mrs. Moreton wouldn't dare handle some of her tarantulas, even the pretty one from Tucson that had pink feet and was named Blondy.

Mrs. Moreton's prize specimen is a hand-sized spider belonging to an unidentified species of the grammastola family. It is mounted in a slab of clear plastic.

Until it died of an injury, she said she had expected it to grow to record size because of its prodigious appetite.

"It ate one medium-size bullfrog a week and snacked on 10 crickets a day," she said.

Wearing sneakers, Mrs. Moreton leads her tours down nature trails and over log bridges outside the mill.

SPOTTING A spider's intricate orb web on a bush, she quickly sprayed it with white paint and fixed it on black mounting paper for an exhibit.

"Spider silk has a greater tensile strength than steel," she said. "The army uses black widow silk in gun sights because it doesn't contract or expand with the weather."

She said spiders also use several kinds of silk, depending on the purpose, and not all of it is white. Egg baskets, for instance, ar partly woven of brown strands. A female deposits 500 to 1,200 eggs inside, and about 100 young survive until spring, she said.

Widowed 16 years ago, Mrs. Moreton said she has been totally devoted to her arachnids for the past 12 years. She said she even set aside her career as a freelance writer and photographer, although she still sells her photos to such publications as "Encyclopaedia Britannica," "Smithsonian," "Natural History" and "Audubon."

She said photography originally sparked her interest in arachnids.

"I WENT OUT in the garden to photograph a spider web to hang in the kitchen. The photo was a failure," she recalled. "Then I went to the Library of Congress and read everything they had on spiders: 13 books."

She said her son and daughter "thought I was crazy at first."

She spent the next five years roaming the country, collecting spicimens, reading up on spiders and meeting with prominent arachnologists.

"Some children over here in the neighborhood wanted to help me collect spiders and they suggested we have a little club. But a little club would just fade away, so I made it the National Arachnid Society," Mrs.Moreton said. "Now there are members in every state."

She said she bought the mill and started the museum after the Smithsonian Institution made light of her suggestion that it begin a spider exhibit for children.

"YOU WOULD HAVE thought I suggested they turn live rattlesnakes loose," she said.

The Smithsonian has since opened an insect zoo with two or three tarantulas, she said, and other zoos and museums have been asking her advice on starting their own.

Despite her reputation as the Spider Lady, Mrs. Moreton said she doesn't regard her spiders as true pets.

"Scientists say they have little or no intelligence," she said. "But I don't believe that at all."

She said she is mainly interested in her arachnids because they are such a fascination for children.

"I love children and enjoy seeing them have a good time."

Politicians, bureaucrats fighting battle of the bulge

by MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington's normally deskbound politicians and bureaucrats are in a jogging jag. Suddenly, running has become a mass movement here.

The faces in the crowd vary — an aging senator, an ex-astronaut, the Swedish ambassador, an editorial writer, one congressman who has run in a dozen countries, another who competes in the Boston Marathon.

From dawn on, runners trot along the Reflecting Pool, on the mulepaths of the old barge canal that parallels the Potomac, on the grassy Ellipse behind the White House, down the tree-shaded Mall.

AT LUNCHTIME, THE Pentagon's legions, in shorts and T-shirts, pour over the Potomac River bridges to circle the Lincoln Memorial and dash back to their desks. Military men are allowed four hours a week "for athletic endeavors."

There hasn't been so much physical activity here since every loyal member of John F. Kennedy's New Frontier felt dutybound to take a 50-mile hike.

Many government workers are young, well-educated, well-paid and health-conscious — the type who tend to jog. Many agencies offer shower rooms, making lunchtime runs possible.

Women government workers have been pressing for space where they can change and shower. At the White House, women clamored until they got equal time in the small exercise room. The 5,100-member Pentagon Officers Athletic Cub is building facilities for 500 women.

THE PRESIDENT'S Council on Physical Fitness commissioned a survey which showed 7 million Americans over age 22 jog several times a week — 6 per cent of the adult population. Seventy per cent of them are men. Nowhere is the trend more evident than here.

Tony Diamond, a runner who works in NASA'S Low Cost Systems Office, explains running's popularity this way: "You have a sedentary population here. People aren't farmers or factory workers — they don't have natural outlets for their energy."

Diamond heads the Federal Interagency Jogging Council, whose members gather once a month at the Jefferson Memorial and race around the Tidal Basin.

Three years ago, 30 runners from five government agencies would run. Now 300 from 50 agencies show up. This spring 57 of them ran in the Boston Marathon.

THE COAST GUARD used to produce the fastest runners, Diamond says. Lately the FBI has pulled ahead.

At 74, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S. C., runs every morning. In foul weather, he runs around his basement.

"I think blood circulation is the secret of health," he says.

Count Wilhelm Wachtmeister, the Swedish ambasssador, calls himself a reluctant jogger.

"It's boring, but very healthy," he says.

William Lukash, the president's doctor, runs behind the White House and prescribes a running regime for about 20 Jimmy Carter aides. He says President Carter used to run in Plains, Ga., but, confined to the White House grounds, can't run in Washington.

REP. RICHARD Lephardt, D-Mo., drives to the Capitol from the suburbs in his sweatsuit, then paces down to the Washington Monument and back.

"This is a strenuous job," he says. "I'm concerned about my heart like anybody else."

Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., 43, follows the same pattern. He says, "I looked around here at guys who were 55, 60, 65 years old and who had saggy midsections and I said, 'My God, I'd better take care of myself."

"If I have a problem to analyze, I do it while I'm running because it's the only time I can concentrate on something without interruption," Alexander says.

EX-ASTRONAUT MICHAEL Collins runs a few miles three days a week around a college track before reporting for work at the Air and Space Museum.

"It increases my tolerance for pushing papers," Collins says. He says he's noticed the number of runners has quadrupled during his seven years in Washington.

William Shannon, 49, a Washington-based editorial writer for The New York Times just chosen to be U.S. ambassador to Ireland, trots at a high school track with a Welsh terrier on a leash. He sometimes "plots out editorials in my mind."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., jogs six miles daily from his home to the Capitol, where he wages war against the promiscuous bureaucratic limousines he sees along the way.

Rep. Sam. Stratton, D-N.Y., jogs even when abroad on congressional trips. He has run in Peking and Shanghai, along the banks of the Nile, in Tel Aviv, Riyadh, Teheran, Mogadishu, Munich, Heidelberg, Brussels, Paris, Athens, Madrid, Saigon, Bangkok, Jakara, Ankara, and Taipei.

Rep. Goodloe Byron, D-Md., has run in five Boston Marathons, once finishing about 200th in a field of about 400. He runs in his hometown of Frederick, Md., every morning before driving to work. "When I first started, people thought I was very eccentric," he says. "No more."

Kojak in, Kipling out as TV comes to Colorado town

by DAN CHISZAR

COPPER MOUNTAIN, Colo. (UPI) — Captain Kangaroo and Sesame Street, beaming west on television signals from Denver, used to bounce off 14,246-foot Mt. Evans, sail over Copper Mountain and fade away.

A wind-powered microwave tower went up last year on a nearby mountain peak, cable was laid and the first few television sets in Copper Mountain winked on with November election results. The tube, and its problems, had slipped into the cluster of condominium buildings.

Forty-seven families, including 31 children ranging in age from 16 years to two months, live year-around in the 4-year-old Rocky Mountain resort community 70 miles west of Denver.

BEFORE THE TOWER began coaxing television signals into Copper Mountain, most of its families read diversely and often. They listened to music. Parlor games were played, friends were entertained and conversation was its own reward.

Television came and Kojak began to nudge out Kipling. Copper Mountain discovered Charlie's Angels could not only compete with Dickens for leisure time, it could win. But the main effect of the community's new luxury was on the children.

The kids of Copper Mountain tumble out of bed Saturday mornings and scramble downstairs to watch cartoon shows. They watch television when they come home from school. Many watch it later in the evening. Some would watch it even more, if allowed.

"I found that my kids have become addicted," said Sarah Jones. "At first, they weren't too interested, and they would read and entertain themselves. But the more it's available, the more they watch. I think they'd watch it as much as I'd let them."

KATIE JONES, 8, used to read more books. Now she reads the TV schedule to find out when the Brady Bunch comes on. Her sister, Debbie, 10, sits with her in the playroom, faces frozen to the portable set on the top shelf of a bookcase.

Zandy Wennerstrom says her two children — Sean, 7, and Lori, 3 — need prompting before they will leave the tube on Saturdays to play outside.

"They'd rather watch television than go out and sled, so now I have to encourage them to go out and do other things," she said.

Cindy Turner, a traveling librarian who works in Silverthorne, Brekenridge and Frisco, where the Copper Mountain children attend school, said the children from Copper Mountain aren't reading as many books.

"I think they read more when they did not have television than any of the children in the county who did have television," Mrs. Turner said.

One third-grader, Vanda Lewis, said she missed television a great deal because "the kids in school all would ask me if I saw some show the night before and I would have to say no."

Vanda said she now watches television every night. She said her television time used to be spent playing outside, jumping rope, coloring in her coloring books or perhaps bouncing on her trampoline in the back yard.

Vanda said she doesn't read nearly as many library books now as during her pre-television days. She was asked why.

"OH, I DON'T KNOW," she said. "I just don't read them as much anymore. I don't know why."

Ann LaFabregue has three children, aged 5, 8 and 10. The family moved to Copper Mountain in 1975 from Connecticut, where television was a favorite pastime.

"It wasn't a terrible shock for them to get used to not having TV," she said of her kids. "It wasn't too long before they learned to climb mountains or read."

Then came television, she said, and her children "tuned her out."

"WHEN YOU CALL THEM for dinner, nobody hears you. I've actually had to turn the set off at times. Right now, the television system is down again. The family atmosphere is a bit nicer without TV."

Other members of the community say television had an adverse effect on their family life until they made a conscious effort to avoid habitual viewing.

"I notice Steve and I sit home now and watch TV rather than think of something to do," said Mrs. Wennerstrom. "We didn't have television for almost two years. Then we went to bed much earlier and we socialized more. We used to play cards three or four times a week, but now we rarely do.

"We're starting to read more now, and in the past couple weeks, we're starting to get out more. We're playing cards more, too. But it really is a conscious thing; you are tempted to maybe be lazy and watch TV."

GARY ANDRUS, vice president of marketing at the ski resort, moved to Copper Mountain 18 months ago from California, where he and his wife often ate dinner in front of the TV. He remembers shaking the television habit.

"After dinner, there was nothing to do, so we talked. My wife and I had the broadest level of communication we've ever had.

"We learned very deep things about each other. We read more. My reading of novels tripled or quadrupled. It gave us time to be with our 17-month-old daughter.

"Now that we have television, we made a strict vow to let our daughter watch only programs like Sesame Street. We are more sensible in our use of television now."

The system which delivers the television signals to Copper Mountain has gone on the fritz at least five times since it went up last November. Prudence Bishop, whose husband helped install the sysaem, said the telephone begins ringing only minutes after the television sets go blank.

"They went without TV for four years," she said. "Now, if they go without it for one night they go bananas and scream."

AA follows St. Francis' lead, Rockefeller agrees

Imagine turning down a gift of thousands of dollars when you need it.

It happens regularly at world headquarters of Alcoholics Anonymous in New York.

And the refusal to accept money — say $10,000 or more in a will — goes back to something St. Francis of Assisi did that John D. Rockefeller Jr. approved of.

In his book, "A.A. Comes of Age," Bill Wilson, the late co-founder of A.A. tells how early leaders took their inspiration from St. Francis of Assisi — whose own spiritual movement was founded on a principle of poverty.

"THE LESS money and property they had to quarrel about," Wilson wrote, "the les would be the diversion from their primary purpose . . . Why be tempted and diverted when there was no need for it."

A.a., as a result, adopted the wisdom of St. Francis as its own. But the very human leaders of A.A. once were tempted to deviate.

The annals of A.A., on file at the General Service Offices in New York show the temptation came in 1937.

That year A.A.'s success in helping alcoholics to recover had attracted the attention of John D. Rockefeller Jr.

Rockefeller asked A.A. people to meet with him.

SOMETHING bigger than vision of sugar plums danced through their heads.

Wlson recalled that he and his associates had visions of A.A. hospitals, rehabilitation centers and trainloads of free literature for suffering alcoholics.

All this would be as a result of the unlimited financial backing they expected from Rockefeller.

So the meeting took place. Rockefeller listened to the story of A.A.'s beginnings and the grandiose dreams.

"I think money will spoil this," Rockefeller said.

Of the encounter, Wilson wrote:

"WE ACTED accordingly, and A.A. stayed poor.

"St. Francis had give us the idea, but John D. wisely forced us to live up to it.

"This was the oddly assorted pair who were really responsible for A.A.'s tradition on money.

"Thank God for them both."

Today there are more than 30,000 A.A. groups in more than 92 countries. They hold local, area and regional meetings, contentions and forums.

EACH YEAR they send 91 delegates to a conference in New York, where the business of A.A. is conducted.

A.A. has more than one million members. It is the world's largest self-help organization. Many authorities say A.A. has the best success with alcoholics.

Its policy prohibiting government money, outside contributions and grants, gifts or bequests makes it unique. Even voluntary contributions or bequests of any one member are limited to no more than $300 in a year.

So it happens at the A.A. office regularly. Money is turned down. The script goes like this:

"Good morning," says a lawyer. "I am happy to tell you that under terms of my late client's will, your fine organization inherits $10,000."

"Sorry," says the A.A. man on the other end of the phone.

"We accept no money from anyone except our own members."

"What's the catch," says the attorney.

The A.A. man says.

"No catch."

"Oh, you get money from the government," the lawyer sals.

"Nope," says the A.A. man

"IN MORE THAN 40 years of existence we have yet to accept — or ask for — our first dime from any government."

The lawyer thinks he has the idea.

"You don't like money," he says.

"As a fact, we don't," the A.A. man says.

"O.UR FOUNDERS BELIEVED IT WAS NOT GOOD FOR US."

Thelawyer asks — "Who on earth told them such a story?"

"Two people," the A.A. man says.

"St Francis of Assissi and John D. Rockefeller Jr."

Space shuttle plans for medical care

HOUSTON (UPI) — The coming era of the space shuttle and its promise to open space flight to more ordinary people makes emergency medical care a more important consideration for those who plan orbital missions.

"Heretofore, an astronaut went up into space and had pretty much the perfect body. The backup on the ground had to be fairly minimal," said Roger Koch of Boeing Aerospace Co.

"With the shuttle, you've got all kinds of Toms, Dicks and Harrys going into space. Later on, you're going to have just passenger types, maybe laborers, and you're looking at potential heart cases, appendicitis, etc."

WITH THIS IN MIND, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration paid Boeing Aerospace $100,000 to draft conceptual plans for an expanded ground-to-orbit medical consultation system, the first step in solving the over-all problem.

"As in past Apollo and Skylab programs, a medically trained crew member on board will be supported by NASA medical personnel on the ground at the Johnson Space Center," Koch said.

"However, the space agency has recognized that in some cases specialized medical expertise which might be required will not be available at JSC."

BOEING RECOMMENDS closing that gap with a sophisticated electronic hookup between a Texas medical center yet to be chosen, JSC located 30 miles south of Houston and the paramedic and his patient hundreds of miles out in space.

"It would permit a medical specialist to be placed in voice, telemetry and video contact with the NASA doctor at JSC, the patient and the onboard medical crewman," Koch said.

In emergencies, needed specialists would be located through a paging system and called to a console — complete with voice communications, video data terminal and television screen — to be placed in the chosen medical center.

Boeing senior engineer Bruce J. Goss said the first-year contract, which ended July 15, bought NASA "the information they will need to go the next step, which will be system design and procurement and modification of existing systems."

Great things are happening this weekend!

Cleveland homers stop Sox, 9-2

CLEVELAND — Three home runs in the first inning, including an inside-the-park shot by Andy Thornton, spurred Cleveland to a 9-2 win over the White Sox here Monday night.

Rick Waits gave up only six hits, four of which came off the bat of Eric Soderholm who was 4-for-4 and drove in both Sox runs, and pitched the distance to get the win.

Steve Stone started for the Sox and was shelled in his 5 1/3 innings stint as he tried for his 14th win against the red-hot Indians, who have scored 29 runs in their last three games.

STONE, WHO IS from the Cleveland area, got into trouble almost immediately when he gave up a home run to the second man he faced, second baseman Duane Kuiper, who hadn't hit a homer in 1,381 previous big league at-bats.

Stone then got Buddy Bell for the second out but things went downhill quickly after that.

Andy Thornton got an inside-the-park home run when leftfielder Richie Zisk gambled and lost, trying to catch Thornton's pop fly. Bruce Bochte followed with the third homer of the inning, a shot to deep right field.

Two singles later, Stone finally retired the side after giving up three runs and five hits.

CLEVELAND ADDED a run in the second on a leadoff double by Frank Duffy and RBI single by Paul Dade.

The Indians took a 5-0 lead when two Sox errors on one play led to a run.

With two out and Paul Dade on

Brock steals for record

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals, who equaled Ty Cobb's modern-day record of 892 stolen bases in the first inning, Monday night established a new mark when he swiped second base in the seventh inning in a game against the San Diego Padres.

The 38-year-old Brock, who set the single season stolen base record of 118 in 1974, set the record against Dave Freisleben when he reached base after forcing pitcher John Urrea at second and stole on the first pitch to Jerry Mumphrey. Catcher Dave Roberts' throw was low but Brock had beat the play anyway.

Time was called then, too, for about five minutes while teammates rushed onto the field to congratulate him. The second base bag was presented to Brock along with the ball.

It's back to drudgery for deflated area Legion team

Lloyd Meyer

Don Friske

Byline report

It was late last Saturday night in Bellwood and plans for the Labor Day weekend were quickly being changed.

Arlington Heights had just been eliminated in its quest for the national title in American Legion baseball, a prize that got away by one victory last summer.

Most people involved with coach Lloyd Meyer and his players figured they would get the opportunity to play in the nationals again this year, especially after impressive victories over Wisconsin (5-1) and Ohio (21-3) that opened the Great Lakes Regionals.

BUT THEY RAN into two tough teams Saturday and lost twice, 6-5 to Indiana and 3-2 to Michigan in 10 innings.

So now instead of baseball in New Hampshire, the parents and fans of the Arlington players will have to go with the conventional holiday cookout or picnic. In most cases, it will have to be without the players, many having returned to colleges throughout the state.

For Meyer, it's back to making deliveries for his dairy. And every so often he'll envision the sight of John Mertins' shot that cleared the fence in left field but was ruled foul.

Meyer was standing along third base when Mertins hit a ball in the top of the eighth against Michigan that would have made the score 2-2. But the umpire put a fast stop to Arlington's excitement with his call.

"WE LOST TWO one-run ballgames, and anybody knows it's the case of a bad break," Meyer said. "This time it was that home run. The last thing I want to do is say an umpire beat me, because that's sour apples. But this was just a case of a bad break."

It ia always much easier to look back at how things might have gone, but in this case it seems like a valid thing to do. If the homer had not been nullified, the run Arlington scored in the ninth would have proved to be the game-winner.

Mertins' blast was clearly fair as it shot over the fence. But it was a liner that kept curving toward the line, which might have been a factor in the call.

Whatever, the decision stooed up despite much argument. A few innings later, Arlington accepted defeat gracefully.

"IT WAS heartbreaking, no doubt about it," Meyer said. "After the first two games, the players really had their minds set on the nationals, and so did I. All we had to do is play another good game and we'd be knocking at the door. It goes to show you there's no sure thing."

The double loss closed Arlington's season with a 46-12 record that included Cook County and Illinois state titles. Before the team dispersed, Meyer got them together for one last meeting.

"I guess the only thing I really told them was that in life or in baseball it's the one or two little things that make the difference. In the two losses, if we had done one or two things it would have meant the difference," he said later. "But at this level I've got to go back and say we did a lot of things right all year and these kids are winners."

Many of the players were on the roster last year and they remembered the excitement and dignity that were part of the nationals. Meyer said the older players were influencing the younger ones the past few weeks, and there was much talk about the prestige that came with competing in a national tournament.

MEYER NOTICED his players were concentrating more during batting practice. They were making extra efforts to do the small things in the right manner. They had the look and mental attitude of a winner.

"But even that feeling doesn't win games because the next guy could be just as hungry," Meyer said.

One thing that a confident attitude will produce is respect from the opponents. It happened all summer.

"I noticed how happy Indiana and Michigan were to beat us, not just for themselves. It was a great uplift for their program to beat Arlington Heights. It shows how everybody is shooting for us," Meyer said. "And that's a tribute to us."

Cubs lose to artful Dodgers' stolen bases

LOS ANGELES — While Lou Brock was running roughshod over the memory of Ty Cobb farther down the Coast, little Davey Lopes and the Dodgers contributed in their own small way to the art of the stolen base, whipping the Cubs, 4-1, Monday night as Tommy John picked up his 16th victory of the season.

The NL West leading Dodgers rebuilt their edge over Cincinnati to 9½ games with the help of late-inning home run power from Reggie Smith and strong relief work from Lance Rautzhan and Mike Garman. The Cubs spoiled John's shutout bid in the eighth on Jose Cardenal's RBI single, but Rautzhan and then ex-Cub Garman came on to push the Cubs nine games behind Philadelphia.

STOLEN BASES were instrumental in the first inning when the Dodgers jumped on Cub starter Mike Krukow. Krukow, the rookie righthander, had beaten Los Angeles last week for his only victory since June, but Monday night the Dodgers had other plans.

Lopes opened the first by drawing a walk and promptly stealing second base. On the very next pitch, L.A. shortstop Bill Russell bounced a seeing-eye bleeder over the mound and through the box to send Lopes racing home with the game's first run.

Russell didn't wait long to steal second base on Cub catcher George Mitterwald. From there, Russell scored on Ron Cey's single to right field. It was the 98th RBI for Cey, who is climbing out of a deep slump.

After the first inning, Krukow settled down into a duel with crafty Dodger lefty Tommy John, who entered the game with a 15-5 record. John's only loss in recent weeks was to Krukow and the Cubs.

WITH HIS sinking fast ball working wonders and his slow curve, John was in control against the Cubs. He nursed a 2-0 lead until the seventh when Smith gave him two more runs with a centerfield homer with a man on base.

John breezed through the first seven innings, scattering five hits including a pair of singles by Krukow. The Cub hurler's second hit came after a one-out double by Mitterwald in the fifth, but Ivan DeJesus lined into a double play to Russell as Krukow was caught off base.

Lopes, 31, one of the premier base-stealers in the game, singled and stole second again, leading off the third. He dashed to third when Russell grounded out to third baseman Steve Ontiveros, beating the relay from Bill Buckner, but Krukow retired Reggie Smith and Cey to end the threat.

Neither team's regular centerfielder was in the lineup at game time.

Hard-earned victory killed Cubs' pennant chances

Art Mugalian

Byline report

This will be the first obituary.

But many will follow and they will tell how death overcame the Cubs.

Some will say that success was too heady an experience, that the pressure sapped the team's strength. Success, they will say, can mark the beginning of the end for the over-confident, the underqualified or the overburdened.

OVERBURDENED they were, with an entire victory-starved city staking its psychic well-being on the fortunes of its favorite team. Underqualified, certainly, and for proof you need look only at the preseason forecasts of doom. Questionable trades and a limited supply of talent led to pannings by the press and apathy from the public.

But overconfidence is for the cocky, the self-righteous, the well-fed. Not these young, hungry Cubs! These were not the hated Yankees, arrogant, overpaid and weaned on winning. If anything, these Cubs were laboring under the impression that they couldn't pitch, couldn't hit the curve, and couldn't make the play in the field. Their unexpected rise to the heights defied even the players' own belief.

It was a simple thing, then, that derailed what some of us were calling the Cub Pennant Express. It was a single game, one of 162 during the course of the season. It was one day out of 365.

IT WAS A GAME played in late July, certainly late enough in the season to cast giant shadows over the remainder of the pennant race. Pennants, indeed, have been decided much earlier.

The Cubs won the game, 16-15, straining as if to crack through 13 long, muscle-wilting innings. Victory, sweet as ever, was achieved on the heroic performances of 25 (or very nearly 25) Cervantian knights.

It was an incredible game and it held a rare fascination over its observers, who in some cases, ceased their daily functions in order to witness the proceedings. The players too were caught up in the excitement of the event and, not coincidentally, they began calling it the greatest game that anybody had ever seen.

It was a great game, but by winning it the Cubs lost a pennant.

THROUGHOUT THE Cubs' slide from first place injuries played an important part, though the minor injuries far outnumbered the critical ones. The injuries to Bruce Sutter and Rick Reuschel, the most puzzling and least understood of a rash of bumps and bruises, also were the most crucial.

Both Sutter and Reuschel hurt themselves in the 16-15 game although neither likely would admit it today. They may or may not have seen the signs.

Sutter, who had begun his personal humiliation of National League batters shortly into the season, was the engine of motion for the Cubs. His amazing feats of relief pitching in May and June were instant national mythology. The Cubs zoomed to the top of the East.

When Sutter was hurt, it seemed like a cruel blow to the team's chances, but Bruce came back after resting 10 days to pitch in the 16-15 game and he threw with his old intensity.

THE TEAM perked then, its confidence in Bruce (and themselves) restored. It would be the last important contribution Sutter would make to the pennant race.

Reuschel, a late comer in the world of big-name pitchers, was thriving on a steady diet of work. His every-fourth-day regimen was timed so precisely that even a traffic jam on the way to the ball park could cause a fluctuation in his sinker.

Reuschel made a surprise and altogether heroic appearance in the 16-15 game. But he upset his biological rhythm in the process. He had barely pitched enough to work up a normal sweat. Although he batted and ran the bases during his noble effort, the exertion didn't seem severe.

Nevertheless, Reuschel answered a question about his pitching timetable with unusual hesitation for the straight-talking farm boy. He, uh, didn't know if he'd be able to pitch Saturday as scheduled. Perhaps it hadn't occurred to him until that moment. The adrenalin high, he said, was still pumping through his veins.

BUT RICK WAS troubled. During his next start, on Saturday, he suffered a rare poor showing, then suffered a mysterious muscle spasm in his back. He couldn't win again for 19 days, during which time the Cubs fell all the way from first to fourth place.

Sutter, meanwhile, was on the disabled list with a recurrence of the shoulder ailment that had plagued him earlier.

It was obvious that Bruce had tried to pitch too soon. He had pitched in the 16-15 game.

That one game, July 28, was the day things began to fall apart. The very next night the Cubs were shut out by old-friend Joe Niekro, though few of the present-day Cubs remember when Niekro could throw hard enough to break glass.

Reuschel was ineffective and Sutter was unavailable for three weeks. But it took less than two weeks for the Cubs to turn a two-game lead into a seven-game deficit.

It seems likely that 1977 will be recalled as the year that a festering feud between manager Herman Franks and outfielder Jose Cardenal cost the Cubs a flag. But nothing could be farther from the truth.

The date on which rested the fortunes of the 1977 Cubs was July 28, a day when the Cubs beat the World Champion Reds, 16-15, in 13 innings, a day that should live in infamy.

Title sparks Over-the-Hill Gang

To some, life just starts at the age of 30 . . . or even higher.

It did for the Over-the-Hill Gang (19-4), who won the Men's 16-inch Class A Championship with a 13-2 win over P. J. Trick Shop.

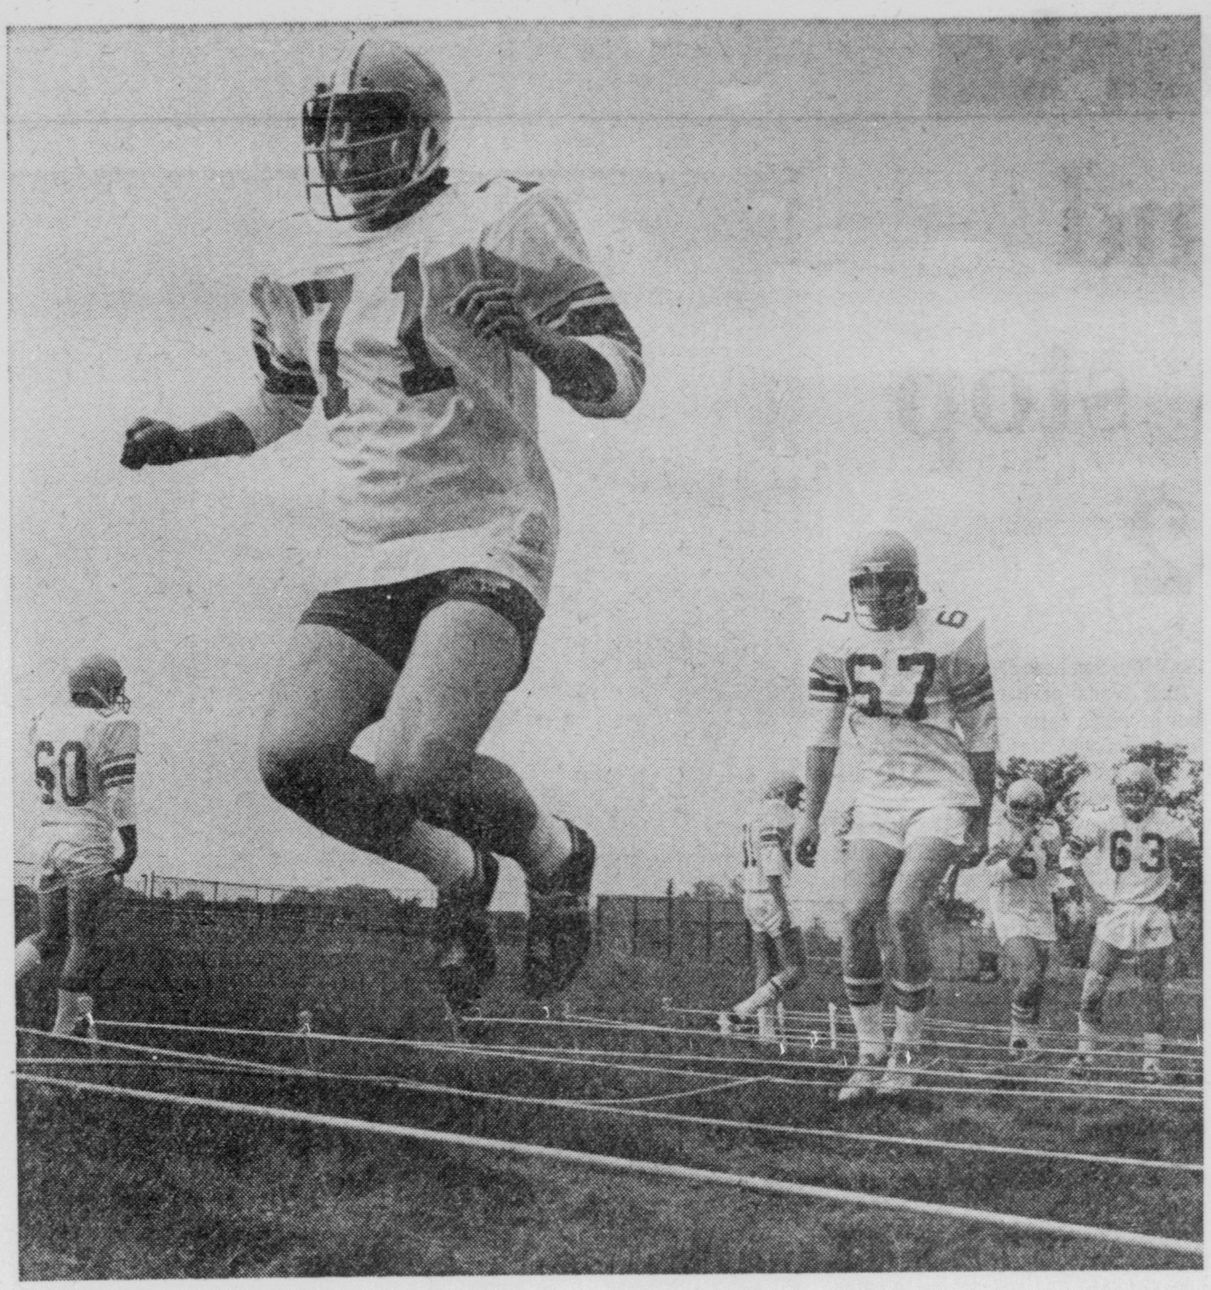

Starting a team with an average age of 30, ranging to the extremes of 18 and 39, the Over-the-Hill Gang put together a 21-hit attack at Kimball Park in Rolling Meadows.

Pat Brady and Mike Fenney each had two home runs as all members of the winning squad reached base with a hit. Winning pitcher was Ken Wirth Sr., who owns an 18-2 record for the year.

Over-the-Hill Gang completed a 13-game winning streak with its victory as it overcame an early season three game deficit to win both the league division and playoff championships. It was the first time in five years that a division winner has gone through the playoffs to win the championship.

Three members of the Over-the-Hill Gang led the season attack with eight home runs apiece. They were Mike Fenney, Pat Brady and Ron Hintze. Leading hitters for the season were Ken Wirth Jr., Pat Brady and Don Cooper, all with .560 averages.

The Over-the-Hill Gang was sponsored by Homes North by Northwest and Pippies Pizza, both from Rolling Meadows.

THE HAWK HOP. Harper tackle Kurt Ryckman (71) runs through a conditioning drill. The Hawks are preparing for their season opener against Kennedy-King at home Sept. 10.

League-leading Yankees rally to win over Royals

The battle between division leaders was close, but the skirmish between the best and worst was better in major league baseball Monday.

In the American League, Chris Chambliss powered a three-run homer to give the East Division pace-setting New York Yankees a come-from-behind win over West Divison-leading Kansas City.

In the National League, however, it took Philadelphia, with the best record in baseball, 14 innings to dispose of cellar-dwelling Atlanta.

PINCH-HITTER Chambliss, hitless in his last 11 at-bats, slammed his homer in the eighth inning to rally the Yankees to a 5-3 victory over the Royals.

Chambliss hit for Cliff Johnson, who earlier had homered to put New York ahead 2-1. Al Cowens followed George Brett's single with his 19th homer off Yankee starter Catfish Hunter in the sixth inning to give the Royals a 3-2 lead.

Dave Johnson drew a bases-loaded walk off Steve Hargan with two out in the bottom of the 14th inning to give the Phillies a 3-2 victory over the Braves.

LUZINSKI connected for his 33rd homer of the season after a walk to Mike Schmidt to give the Phillies a lead in the third inning, but Atlanta tied it off pitcher Larry Christenson in the eighth. With one out, Rowland Office walked and with two out Jeff Burroughs hit his 35th homer to make it 2-2.

Major league baseball

Larry Hisle, who had four hits in the opener, drove in a run with his third single of the nightcap in the sixth inning and Lyman Bostock followed with a sacrifice fly to lift the Minnesota Twins to a 6-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays for a sweep of their doubleheader.

The Twins, who moved into second place in the American League West only 2½ games behind Kansas City, won the opener 7-6 on Bob Gorinski's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning.

PAT KELLY smashed his third career grand slam homer to support the four-hit pitching of Rudy May and lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 6-1 triumph over Nolan Ryan and the California Angels.

The victory left the Orioles four games behind the first place New York Yankees in the American League East.

Ryan, 17-13, struck out 11 batters and passed the 300-strikeout mark for a record fifth year with 305. It also was his 103rd game in which he struck out 10 or more batters.

Ex-Cincinnati star Tony Perez drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a single to help the Montreal Expos snap the Reds' five-game winning streak with a 7-2 victory.

Rookie Mitchell Page, who earlier hit a three-run homer, hit a solo blast in the ninth inning off relief ace Bill Campbell to give the Oakland A's a nationally-televised 8-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox despite three homers by Jim Rice.

Cleveland homers stump Sox, 9-2

first, catcher Brian Downing's throw, trying to catch Dade stealing second, bounced into center field. Chet Lemon, backing up the play, threw to third but his throw also was wild, going into the Sox dugout to allow Dade to score.

Eric Soderholm, for the second day in a row, kept the White Sox from being shut out, something no team has been able to do yet this season. Soderholm cracked a solo homer, his 22nd of the season, in the sixth inning. Soderholm also singled in a run in the ninth.

CLEVELAND GOT that run back in the bottom of the inning with three straight singles that sent Stone to the showers, after he had given up a total of six runs on 12 hits in 5 1/3 innings. Silvio Martinez came on in relief to retire the side.

But the Indians struck again in the seventh when Thornton cracked his second homer of the game, a solo shot that made it 7-1.

The Indians added two more runs after two out in the eighth on Duane Kuiper's single off Don Kessinger's glove that allowed a run to score, then an error by Kessinger that sent the ninth run home. The error was the fourth Sox error in the game.

That brought on Don Kirkwood, who walked Thornton to load the bases before getting Bruce Bochte to hit into a double play to end the inning.

The series concludes here tonight as Ken Kravec (7-6) will face Wayne Garland (10-15). The Sox then enjoy off days Wednesday and Thursday before opening a home stand against Baltimore.

Bears cut five more from squad

The Bears got a head start on today's roster cutdowns by trimming five players from their squad Monday. One more must be dropped by 4 p.m. today to get the roster down to the league's required 52.

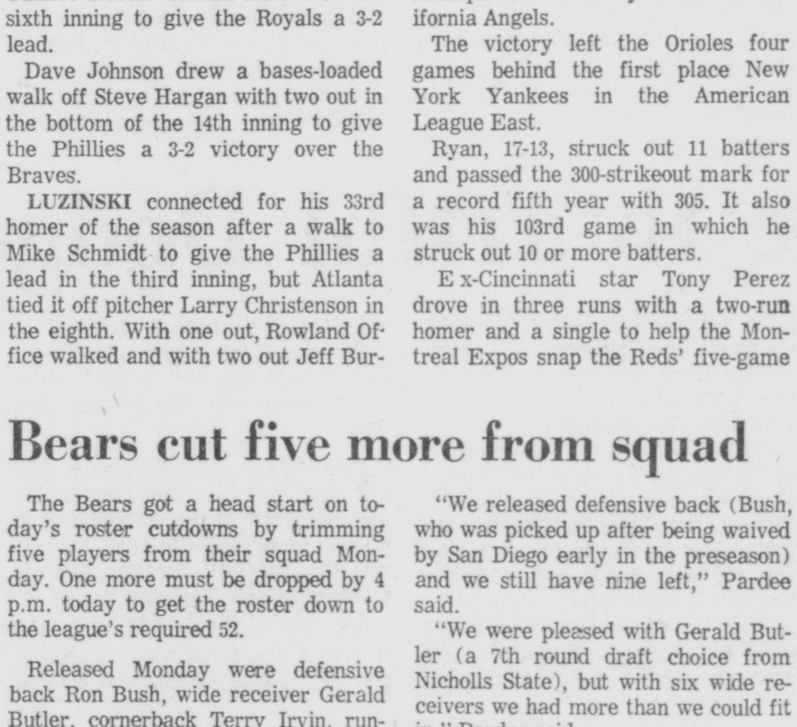

Released Monday were defensive back Ron Bush, wide receiver Gerald Butler, cornerback Terry Irvin, running back Rod Wellington and veteran tight end Doug Kingswriter.

Head coach Jack Pardee said the cuts are getting tougher as he nears the regular season roster of 43. He said the number of men left at some positions also influenced his decision.

"We released defensive back (Bush, who was picked up after being waived by San Diego early in the preseason) and we still have nine left," Pardee said.

"We were pleased with Gerald Butler (a 7th round draft choice from Nicholls State), but with six wide receivers we had more than we could fit in," Pardee said.

Kingswriter, who last played for Minnesota in 1975, was trying to come back after an injury sidelined him all last season. Irvin was a Bears 12th round choice out of Jackson State while Wellington was picked up via the free agent route a few weeks ago.

Tennis finds match in rain and winds

by RICK CHRISTOPHER

The most prominent winner in the opening rounds of the 17th Annual Paddock Tennis Tournament was not totally unexpected.

The rain, aided by strong and gusty winds, won going away, as it completely swept a field of more than 100 youngsters midway through the second round of the boy's singles and doubles division Sunday at the courts at Harper College, Palatine.

"The one thing that we had the least control over . . the rain . . . seemed to have the biggest impact on the tournament," Mel Timmons, tournament director, said.

''BUT SURPRISINGLY enough, things went pretty smoothly despite the inclement weather," Timmons said. "Everyone concerned was very helpful in getting play started after early morning rains had set in."

Parents, players and supervisors from the Arlington Tennis Club, equipped with both squeegees and mops swabbed the surface of some 12 courts Sunday in preparation for second round action of boy's (15 years and younger) doubles play.

Their efforts, noticed and appreciated by tournament director Timmons, lasted but a half-round as once again the skies opened up. This time, however, play was not resumed, as strong winds blew the protective screens from the fences.

"The wind was just tremendous and it's very difficult to play under those conditions, at any age," Timmons said. "The wind was blowing from both sides of the court and as such, the talent of the individuals is taken away from the game.

"One pleasing note of the tournament was the cooperation of the parents. If they continue to come out and understand how things are run, better things can happen for all," Timmons said. "Just look how helpful they were Sunday."

IN OPENING ACTION Saturday, three rounds of singles play and another of doubles were completed under sunny skies.

From a draw of more than 100 boys in the singles division, only 13 participants remain for quarterfinal matches Saturday at various court sites.

Returning veterans from last year's group, Doug Weber and Steve Siebold, are among them.

Weber defeated Bob Romei in straight sets, 6-0, 6-0, in his first round match. Against his second round opponent, Weber had a tougher time with Cliff Riester, finally winning both sets, 6-1, 6-2.

Riester, one of the area's newest residents, was ranked fourth among 12-year olds last season in Brazil.

SIEBOLD, WINNER by default in his opening round match, swept George Reichel, Jr. in straight sets, 6-0, 6-0.

Others advancing to the quarterifnals were Jeff English, Chris DeSimone and Jim Scully.

DeSimone beat Tom Stoltz by identical scores of 6-3 to advance. He won by default in the first round.

English and Scully, interrupted in their third round play Sunday by rain, will continue where they left off Saturday.

Two players who were not entered in this years tournament were the brothers, Dan and Rob Weiss. Dan won the singles division a year ago and the pair took the doubles honors.

IN THE ONE completed round of doubles, the team of Weber and Siebold advanced with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over Ton VanVleck and Don Bonaguidi.

Doubles match between Jerry Borst-Chris DeSimone and Mark Van Gorp-Tom Hall was interrupted by rain and will be continued.

Eight single quarterfinal matches will start at 9 a.m. Saturday at one of the various court sites followed by doubles play. The other remaining 19 divisions also will get under-way.

The finals, scheduled for Sept. 5, at Arlington High School, can be moved indoors if needed. In past years, the tournament has used the River Trails Tennis Courts in rain situations.

Dibbs and Orantes in Pro net finals

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Fourth-seeded Eddie Dibbs, relying on his patented baseline game, Monday advanced to the finals of the 50th U.S. Professional Championships with a 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5 victory over Poland's Wojtek Fibak.

Dibbs of Miami Beach, Fla., next faces third-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain, the tournament's top surviving seed, Tuesday night in the finals at the century-old Longwood Cricket Club.

Orantes, winning 15 of his last 16 games, walloped Chile's Jaime Fillol, 6-3, 6-0, 6-1.

Only last week, Fillol bested Orantes in the quarter-finals of the Canadian Open in Toronto. Monday, he followed the plan that gave him that victory and charged Orantes. But the plan backfired as Orantes placed his shots deep.

Fillol's main problem was in his approach shots. Several times he made shots to approach the net but didn't get there in time, allowing Orantes to pass him.

Big Ten eyes playoff cage plan

KINGS ISLAND, Ohio — The Big Ten is considering adoption of a post-season basketball tournament to determine the conference's entrant into NCAA tournament play, Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said.

"There is no finality at all to this matter," said Duke. "I want to emphasize that we are merely exploring a post-season basketball tournament."

He said a committee made up some of the conference's basketball coaches has recommended inauguration of post-season play following the 1978-79 season.

The commissioner first proposed the study into the post-season tournament, but now says he is "somewhat more opposed to than in favor of it."

He said that while such a tournament would generate estimated gross revenue of $750,000, it would also cut into class time. He noted that of the major conferences in the country, only the Southeastern, Pacific Eight, Western Athletic Conference and the Big Ten do not presently have post-season tournaments.

Bando, Brewers fight suspension

MILWAUKEE — The Milwaukee Brewers, who have lost their share of baseball games this year, Tuesday try to win a different contest — an appeal of a three-game suspension against third baseman Sal Bando.

The hearing is set before American League President Lee MacPhail. Slated to appear with Bando are several Brewer officials, including President Allan "Bud" Selig, and umpire Durwood Merrill.

The suspension resulted from an incident in a game at Toronto July 30 when Bando was ejected aftr arguing with Merrill. The umpire's report apparently said Bando came into bodily contact with him in the argument and that caused the suspension.

Independence cut from Cup trials

NEWPORT, R.I. — The New York Yacht Club America's Cup Committee Monday eliminated the 12-meter yacht Independence from among the three boats contending for the right to defend the Cup against a foreign challenger.

Independence got the axe a few hours after she came back to port after a defeat at the hands of Courageous — leading contender for the challenger's role.

Monday's loss put Independence's record at 3-8 in the final selection series which began Aug. 25 and will end by Sept. 8 when the committee must announce its choice.

Courageous stands at 9-1 and Enterprise, the third boat involved in the trials, is 4-7.

NASL players seek recognition

WASHINGTON — The new North American Soccer League Players Association has backstopped its request for voluntary recognition from the league's owners by filing a petition with the National Labor Relations Board, it was disclosed Monday.

The NASL players are affiliated with the National Football League Players Association and NFLPA executive director Ed Garvey announced that the NLRB petition was filed Aug. 16. A NLRB hearing is scheduled for Sept. 8 if the NASL owners haven't extended recognition by then.

Eliot has made smooth transition

Loren Tate

Ray Eliot always feared retirement.

"You devote all that time to coaching, with the tremendous demands on your time, and then: bang! It's gone.

"Well, I decided I wasn't going to spend my time in the garden. I didn't garden when I was coaching and I wasn't about to start. I've kept busy," says Ray.

Eliot, now past 70, has made a smooth transition. He stepped down as University of Illinois football coach in 1959 after giving a year's notice. Now, nearly two decades later, he retains numerous ties as a $1 per year, honorary assistant director. He has assisted Larry Stewart on WDWS radio broadcasts of UI games since the early 1960s, is the chief liaison man between the UI Athletic Association and the Illinois high school football coaches in a clinic that runs annually in conjunction with Illini spring football, served as a director last year for the North-South Shrine all-star football game in Pontiac, Mich., and makes frequent appearances as a guest speaker throughout the nation.

IT IS IRONIC that Eliot is more "famous" in the outer precincts than in Champaign-Urbana.

His record on The Proper State of Mind, made extemporaneously more than a decade ago in a taped interview, is still used by high school coaches to inspire their athletes.

He is a favorite of insurance firms, auto dealers and the military with his fiery, emotional talks on leadership and patriotism. For example, he has been a guest lecturer four times a year for 24 years at Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala.

"I try to build from an athletic experience what it takes to be great in the game of athletics and in the game of life," he explains, and as he talks the words come faster and with building emotion. He is a master at captivating an audience, even an audience of one.

"STAND UP AND be counted," he storms. "Don't duck the issues. There is so much grumbling and criticism in the country today. We need people who are willing to step forward and become involved."

Many of his phrases are time-worn but he can get away with them. Asked his opinion on the Big Two-Little Eight nature of the Big Ten, he reminds that his UI teams in the 1950s won seven of ten from Michigan and "they put their pants on one leg at a time, just like everyone else. They're human. We have to believe that.

"I don't care if Michigan comes here ranked No. 1 in the nation," he goes one. "We've had lots of teams come here No. 1 and lose — Michigan State, Minnesota, Ohio State. In my first year as coach (1942), Minnesota was our first conference opponent and the Gophers were as much the scourge under Bernie Bierman as Michigan is now. Well, we beat them. We fought them for every inch and every yard and we beat them (20-13) because, with all this business about size and speed, it's what's in a man's mind and heart that really counts. Courage and determination will get the job done.

"LET ME REMIND you, sir, that Michigan and Ohio State aren't something new in the Big Ten. When I took the job from Bob Zuppke, he told me they would be the toughest teams to beat. But it doesn't HAVE TO BE that way. It only takes as long to change a team as it takes to make them believe in themselves."

Ray Eliot

There is power in Eliot's words because he believes so strongly. He got out of coaching, as he relates, because of recruiting demands in a changing society, but his convictions on football and life remain firm.

Glancing out the window at a gray sky, Eliot fumed:

"I hope it doesn't rain. We're teeing off in an hour. I'm not real good but I sure enjoy it. Get your golf clubs and come along."

No, Ray Eliot isn't ready for the garden.

What To Look For When Selecting An Insulation Contractor

Look for Home Insulation — The Homefoamers, Members of a nationwise network of foam insulation dealers. Our applicators have in-class and on the job training, and all of our applicators are certified. Our foam is a urea-formaldehyde which will withstand temperatures up to 1208° at which time it will only char, and the fumes are less toxic than wood when burned. It will not settle like conventional fiberglass and the rock wool loose fills, and it has a resistance factor in a 4" cavity equal to a 20-foot solid concrete wall. So, to make your home's walls draft free, and save fuel dollars — Give us a call.

Robert L. Green bridges the gap between office and leisure wear

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

After one last dab of cranberry lip polish, she's ready for the party. Slinky black pumps. A velvet hair ribbon. That gorgeous froth of a Christian Dior dress, all ruffles and petticoats and glamour.

And then there's her husband.

Proper three-piece grey suit, graced with a white shirt and Ivy League tie. Black wing-tips and a narrow belt. In short, a 40-year-old who looks as if he's ready to sign a mortgage, not sip dry Manhattans and talk about his tennis game.

It's a familiar scenario, and one that makes fashion authority Robert L. Green wince.

"When your wife walks into a room with a beautiful fantasy dress and you show up in a traditional business suit, you're going to look pretty silly. That plain suit may be valid for the office, but it's also plain boring," declared Green, a self-professed "man of style" in the fashion world.

"THERE'S GOT to be a bridge between office wear and leisure wear...a way men can look as stylish as their wives do," Green added. Naturally, he's out to provide it.

As a former fashion director and current contributing editor of Playboy Magazine, Green has been helping shape the fashion tastes of Playboy readers since 1958. He also writes a column for Architectural Digest on "style" and is busy with a new book, "The Entertaining Robert L. Green." All of which give him plenty of ideas for jazzing up a staid businessman's wardrobe.

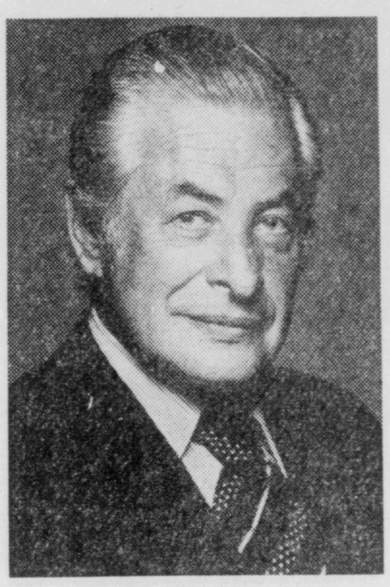

His new "Robert L. Green for Gentlemen" collection includes satin blazers, mohair trousers and silk suits to complement the more elegant fail look for women. There's even a black satin ensemble featuring a mandarin jacket and pants with an elasticized waist.

BUT GREEN'S offerings aren't limited to after-five wear: he's also designed several business suits in "everything from lavender tweed to a classic pinstripe," a tweed military jacket and a "cook's vest" with a drop front, large pockets and matching apron.

Practicality enters the picture with Green's emphasis on separates. His collection features several suits with interchangeable vests in silk broadcloth, wool and velvet, and he says he wants to expand men's use of accessories.

The common theme in all his clothes, says Green, is the appeal to "the individual who cares about clothes and is brave enough to take a chance with fashion."

"Until very recently, it wasn't masculine to be interested in fashion unless you were wealthy," Green noted. "We all accepted the fact that rich men cared about clothes, but when your local garage mechanic said "I'm going out for a fitting," you'd take your car somewhere else." That, thankfully, has changed.

ROBERT L. GREEN

"THE MEN who are buying clothes today are products of the '60s...they have a greater awareness of themselves and their bodies, and they do care about their appearances, especially outside the strict business environment."

"There's a big difference today, though. During the '60s we had a lot of choices in our lives; now in the '70s we're looking at those alternate choices and choosing those that are appropriate," he continued. "Men are recognizing that long flowing caftans are not acceptable in most situations...you work with what you have."

The key to avoiding both the conventional and the extreme, says Green, is to develop a sense of style — that "individual aura" that encompasses a person's voice, appearance and demeanor as well as his clothes.

His own contribution?

"I HAVE pewter buttons on this blue blazer instead of gold — no one expects that," he said with a grin. "And I've brought back the white tie. When I wear it with a colored handkerchief, it's a shot in the arm...my little moment of style."

Naturally, Green's observations on pewter buttons, silk suits and velvet vests aren't aimed at everyone. He admits "the average housewife isn't going to run out and buy my things," and he recognizes that tradition-bound men are still in the majority.

But there's hope yet: "Yes, there are still a lot of followers, but the number of leaders is increasing," he said. "And besides, there are fewer and fewer herds!"

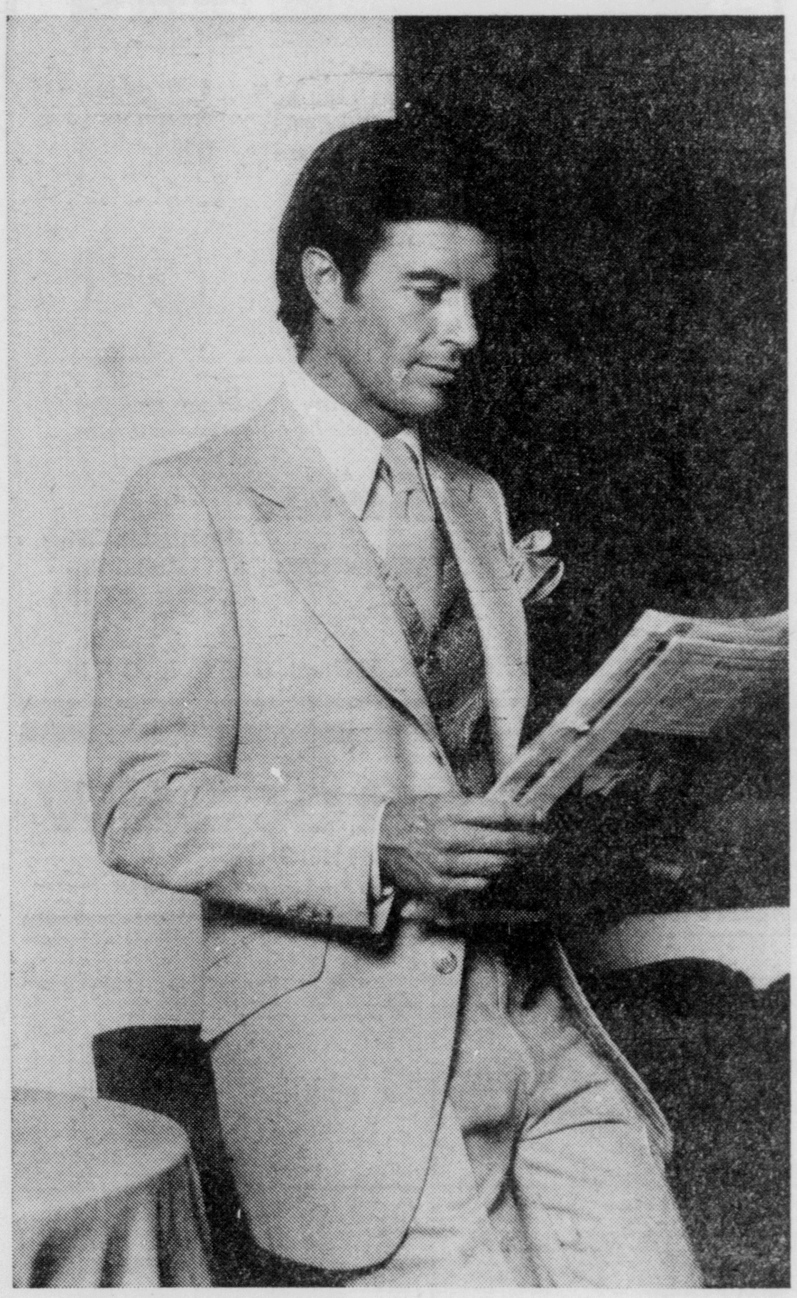

Green will be commentator for Northwest Community Hospital Auxiliary's annual fall fashion show Sept. 29 at the Arlington Park Hilton.

For casual affairs Robert L. Green suggests a silk satin jacket with mandarin collar and matching trousers.

What woman wouldn't be delighted for her party companion to dress in this three-piece silk suit worn with formal accessories?

Even a business suit isn't dull in Robert L. Green's hands. Paisley silk challis vest is paired with helio color worsted woolen herringbone jacket and trousers.

A rugged look to men's sweaters

FALL FASHION HIGHLIGHTS — Sweaters are taking on a rugged look for outdoor wear both in cardigan and pullover styles.

One of the sportswear specialists featuring this look is Lord Jeff. To obtain a deep shaggy texture, yet lightness in weight, long wool from Icelandic sheep is used for the firm's "Baggy Shag" duo. This consists of a solid-color cardigan, closed with silvery buttons, plus a crew neck pullover in an all-over chain pattern, softly muted by the fluffy thickness of the wool.

P.S. Plaid flannel slacks are a natural with brawny sweater sets of this type.

Dear Mr. Juster: Quite often, my husband wears a sports coat and slacks instead of a suit. Now he wants to add a vest, too. I am trying to get him to forget it because I can't see a vest with a sports jacket even if that is supposed to be in style now. I imagine you will disagree. —Mrs. H. P.

What do you have against a vest with sport clothes? Casual-styled vests are being shown in solids to wear with patterned jackets and in fancies to go with plain jackets. This accessory gives a sport outfit more interest so why all the objections?

Dear Mr. Juster: I like the look and feel of leather slacks and coats, but some of my friends think that anyone who goes for that kind of stuff is "weird." Their attitude puzzles me and I would like your opinion on this. —D.N.

The word weird has several connotations and I don't know which one your friends are referring to.

All I can tell you is that leather is now popular for casual use and if you want to wear leather pants and jackets, don't let your friends' comments bother you. Incidentally, you'll have plenty of company.

Dear Mr. Juster: Growing a beard and mustache has created a problem. My beard grew in dark, but the mustache came out blond and my sideburns are a light brown. I'd much prefer all one color. Have you any suggestions? —J.F.R.

You have three choices.

1. Color your mustache and sideburns dark to blend with your beard.
2. Lighten your beard to tie in with your mustache and sideburns.
3. Leave all three alone and let nature take its course.

P.S.—I'm for going along with nature.

Harry Juster

Look smart

NOTE TO R.S. — If you want to wear your coat sleeves sharply creased, that's your privilege. All I can tell you is that "rolled" sleeves have a much more graceful look.

Jeans price war spreads coast to coast

by MICHAEL J. CONLON

The great blue jeans price war of 1977 has now spread from coast to coast, by industry estimates, and shows no sign of an early truce.

Nor does it appear there will be any shorage of jeans as a result of the low prices and heavy buying, although supplies eventually could shrink somewhat.

Ironically the price cutting, which has knocked some prices down by as much as $5 per pair, comes just a little more than one year after the government accused Levi Strauss of price fixing.

What happened?

Levi, which claims to be the world's largest clothing manufacturer, says it all started because its jeans were almost too popular.

A COMPANY spokesman tells us Levi Strauss historically sold only to certain retail outlets. Those which met certain standards. It was that practice which prompted the Federal Trade Commission to lodge a price fixing charge against the company in May of last year. The FTC claimed Levi told its 15,000 distributors what to charge and required them to sell other Levi products in exchange for being allowed to sell the jeans.

The company says that for years there have been "pockets" of resistance around the country to that practice — Southern California was one example — where stores which were not Levi accounts got the jeans from third parties anyway and cut prices to attract customers to their stores.

This began to upset some of the "traditional" Levi dealers.

SO THE FIRST shot in the current price war was fired in Minneapolis early this summer by "County Seat," a chain of 200 stores which the company calls "Levi only stores" — those whose merchandise is 75 per cent or more Levi products.

The chain began its own price cut-

Jeans price war spreads

ting, and the war was on. Instead of turning into a passing thing, the Levi spokesman said, no one wanted to be undersold and the action "touched it off on a big basis."

Right now the price cuts are going on pretty much all across the country, the company says, in most major market areas and at about the same level.

Levi Strauss says it has not cut its wholesale price and does not intend to, even though some retailers claim they are not making any money on the jeans right now. And the company says it cannot increase its production.

"I DON'T THINK there would be a severe shortage," if the war continues, the Levi spokesman said. He described the situation as being about the same as it was a couple of years ago when denim was in short supply. The denim shortage was caused by reluctance in the textile industry to expand its ability to make the material, despite increasing demand from the clothing makers.

The price war, of course, has affected not just Levi but its competitors, whose prices have also fallen to keep pace. Levi Strauss says it's really happy about the whole thing because it thinks it will wind up with an even bigger share of the market once peace comes.

As far as the FTC case is concerned, Levi continues to maintain "there are certain types of stores we don't want to sell to."

And right now at least the FTC would have a hard time backing up one of the contentions it made last year — that consumers are suffering "substantial" losses due to the higher price charged for Levis.

IN ADDITION ANOTHER factor has entered the picture.

On June 23 the Supreme Court reversed a decade-old principle which took a dim view of manufacturers controlling retail distribution. The court, in a case involving GTE-Sylvania and where that firm could sell its TV sts, said such restrictions on location are illegal only if they "unreasonably restrain or suppress competition."

They are not illegal on their face, the court said, and a "rule of reason" must be applied in each case.

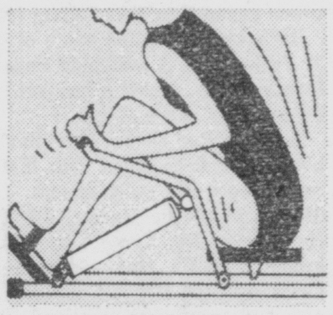

The FTC case has not yet gone to trial.

But whatever happens American consumers are now enjoying a price break.

The doctor says

Weekly exercise will keep muscles strong

I want to do weightlifting and strength exercises to really build up my muscles over a year or two. I don't want to be a "Mr. Universe" but would like to have good muscles. If I stop the exercises later, and have an office job, will my muscles retain their shape or will they be prone to "fall" in a shorter-than-normal period of time compared to a person who developed muscles by normal hard-working labor? Or does the method of muscular development matter?

It really doesn't matter how the muscles were developed — by an exercise program in the gym, at home, or exercise resulting from physical labor.

The point is that the more muscular development you have as a result of the work-exercise, if you then stop and do very little, it will look like the muscles disappear faster than in a person who has smaller muscles to start with. That is because the person with less developed muscles has less to lose to get to the same inactive level so the change is not as striking.

You could maintain your muscles, though, with a reasonable program of exercise one day a week. While we think endurance exercises such as walking and jogging should be maintained more often than once a week to maintain optimal fitness, muscle strength can be maintained with a once a week program.

To give you more information about muscle development and strength and how to maintain what you've got I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. As that issue explains, by maintaining your muscle mass you can help prevent obesity. A short period of strength exercises once a week after you develop your muscles will be as effective in preventing obesity as long time intervals spent in walking and jogging. The secret is in developing muscles and maintaining them. It makes a difference whether the body weight is from fat or muscle.

Can you tell me what the difference is, if any, in taking regular thyroid tablets and taking kelp tablets?

I've heard and read that both have iodine and help the thyroid gland to manufacture thyroxine which an underactive thyroid needs. I'm taking two grains of thyroid daily but would prefer to take kelp if it would do the job as well.

Kelp is a seaweed and it contains iodine. If a person is deficient in iodine, it is a useful source for it. However, it is not the same thing as thyroid tablets at all and cannot be substituted for them.

Thyroid tablets do not contain iodine. They are replacement hormone for the natural thyroid hormone, thyroxine, produced by the thyroid gland. The reason for giving thyroid tablets is because a person's own thyroid gland does not produce enough thyroid hormone. That condition is seldom related to iodine deficiency — although iodine deficiency can cause goiters of the thyroid gland. Usually low thyroid function is an aftermath of an inflammation of the thyroid gland, often unrecognized. I think hou had better stay with your thyroid if your doctor thinks you need them.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column.

Frozen lemon juice wins hurrah for good taste

New Products Department: Friends tell me they've been pleased for months with the 100 per cent full-strength lemon juice that is sold frozen. It's new to me, though, and I want to add my hurrah to those already familiar with it. Its label says the product contains neither preservatives nor chemicals; the flavor is excellent. Not surprising, then, that by following instructions on the bottle, one can make excellent lemonade with it. Moreover, for me it's important to know I have exactly the quantity for an ingredient I'll need for a recipe. With this product, I don't have to worry whether or not my fresh lemons — which I still need for other uses — will produce the required amount of juice.

Dear Roberta: What can I do to remove brown mildew spots from a white linen tablecloth? Tried all kinds of detergents and bleaching with no result. — M.B. Reading

What you have tried are the first two steps professionals use to rid mildew from fabrics. Next try sponging the stains with a soluton of equal parts water and drugstore-type hydrogen peroxide. Then launder the whole cloth. Heavy stains may not come out. In that case, you'll need to find the white dye expressly made for linen.

Dear Roberta: Is it true that canned foods lose their nutrient values if stored for a year? — Annette Bickel

You can't pinpoint a time when they'll lose all their values, a U.S. Department of Agriculture nutritionist advises. It depends largely on the temperature around them; they should be kept in a cool, dry place. Of course, the longer the storage time, the greater the nutrient loss will be.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Hicklin

Jill Shakespeare– Robert J. Hicklin

Colors of the rainbow surrounded Jill Ann Shakespeare as she was married July 30 to Robert J. Hicklin in the First United Methodist Church of Des Plaines. Her matron of honor was in peach and her bridesmaids in yellow, green and blue.

Jill is the daughter of the Stuart Shakespeares and Rob the son of the Donald Hicklins, all of Des Plaines. The young couple both graduated from Maine West High School, Jill in '74 and Rob in '73.

They were married at 4:30 p.m. in double ring rites. Jill wore a white Chantilly lace gown with seed pearl accents and a matching lace picture hat with an elbow-length veil. White orchids, roses, stephanotis and baby's breath were in her bouquet.

Matron of honor Beth Miner of Schaumburg, the bride's sister, wore a peach chiffon gown and carried peach roses, carnations and baby's breath. The three bridesmaids were Sue Shakespeare, Jill's sister, in yellow; Jeanie Kennedy, Des Plaines, in green; and Karen Vavrinek, Adrian, Mich., in blue. Karen is a cousin of the bride.

Doug Keister of Whitewater, Wis., was Rob's best man. Groomsmen included Marty Conroy of Schaumburg, Randy Keiser, Delavan, Wis., and Caesar Beatta, Des Plaines.

A reception followed at Heck's Hall, Chicago, after which the newlyweds spent a few days at Pheasant Run. They have purchased a home in Dazell, Ill., near Peru where Rob is working for Benson-Reiter Datsun.

He attended Illinois Valley College, Oglesby, after high school. Jill was a secretary for a Northbrook company until her marriage.

Children may visit moms at Alexian

Children are now allowed to visit their mother following the birth of a new baby in the maternity unit at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. The new policy enhances the Center's emphasis on promoting family unity and alleviating any anxiety about the new baby on the part of other children in the family.

While children are not allowed in the mother's room, the mothers may visit their other children in a waiting waiting area outside the maternity unit from 7 to 8 p.m. daily and from 2:30 to 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. During these times the father may escort the children to the nursery window to see the new arrival.

The minimum age for visitors to the maternity unit during the regular visiting hours of 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 8 p.m. has been lowered to 12 from previous minimum age of 16. Visiting hours for fathers are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Weddings

Barbara Tracy– Randy Romano

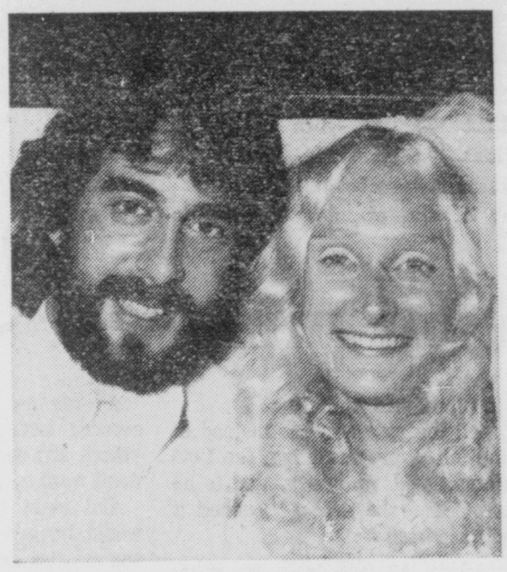

A rainbow color scheme was featured at the wedding of Barbara J. Tracy and Randy P. Romano — just as it was at the bride's grandmother's wedding years and years ago.

Barb is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Tracy and Randy the son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Romano, all of Elk Grove Village. The 3 p.m. ceremony took place Aug. 6 at Queen of the Rosary Church in Elk Grove Village following a romance which began New Year's Eve, 1971.

Barb wore a ruffled white organza gown trimmed in Venise lace. A matching fingertip veil framed her face and she carried a bouquet of orchids, stephanotis and lilies of the vlley.

Barb's sister Donna was maid of honor in a pale blue halter-style gown with matching cape. Bridesmaids were her other sisters, Joanne Tracy, Linda Stone and Jackie Huster, all of Elk Grove; Diane Henderson, Elk Grove; and Tammy Romano, the groom's cousin from Schaumburg. Each wore a gown to match Donna's in coral, mint, green, yellow, pink and cornflower blue, and all the attendants carried yellow roses, blue and green daisies, bachelor buttons, pink and coral carnations and white baby's breath.

RANDY'S BROTHER, John was best man. Groomsmen were Gary Romano, another brother, Mike Warren, Charlie Piermarini, George Hausen and Don Dumelle, all of Elk Grove Village. John Tracy and Jeff Romano, the couple's brother, seated the guests.

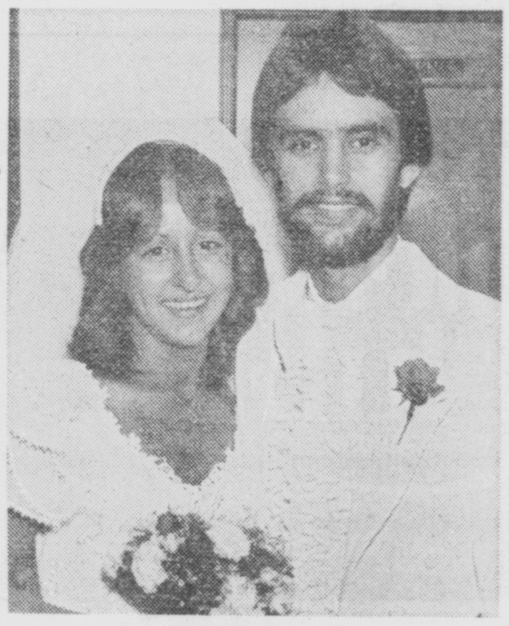

Mr. and Mrs. Randy P. Romano

Following the ceremony there was a reception for 190 guests at Camelot Restaurant, Des Plaines. The newlyweds then honeymooned at Lake Camelot, Wis., for 10 days.

Barb and Randy are '75 graduates of Elk Grove High School and attend Western Illinois University in Macomb, where they are now living.

Nancy Butenschoen–Michael Klausing

A Des Plaines couple, Nancy Ann Butenschoen and Michael Joseph Klausing, were married Aug. 6, and following a week's honeymoon cruising the Caribbean, they are at home in Schaumburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Klausing

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DuWayne Butenschoen, Des Plaines, Nancy and Michael, son of Mrs. Mary Kay Klausing, Des Plaines, and Frank Klausing, Palatine, were married in St. Stephen's Catholic Church, Des Plaines. The 3 p.m. double ring service was followed by a reception for 170 guests in the Des Plaines Moose Lodge.

For her wedding Nancy chose a gown of white organza trimmed in appliques of Venise lace. Her elbow-length veil was held by a Juliet cap of matching lace, and she carried white carnations with stephanotis and apricot roses.

HER SISTER, Janice, was maid of honor, and her sister, Connie, was one of the bridesmaids. Donna Jackowiak, Elk Grove Village, and Caren Lucente, Des Plaines, were also bridesmaids, and the bride's sister, Jean, was junior bridesmaid. Jean wore a floral peasant gown and the others wore apricot halter gowns with matching capelets and carried white daisy pompons, apricot roses and purple statice. Jean's flowers also included rose petals and were carried in a basket.

Carol Meachum– Kim Walter

While attending the University of Illinois, Carol Meachum of Danville and Kim Walter of Arlington Heights met on a blind date, starting a romance that culminated in their marriage this past Aug. 6 in the First Presbyterian Church of Danville.

On the Champaign-Urbana campus, Carol and Kim were neighbors, she a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority and he affiliated with Acacia fraternity.

Carol, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Meachum, graduated from the U of I and is a buyer for Mitsubishi International Corp., Chicago.

KIM IS THE son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Walter. After graduating from Prospect High School and the U of I, he enrolled at Northwestern University Dental School where he will earn his degree next June.

He and Carol are living in Chicago since their marriage.

They exchanged vows in an 11:30 a.m. ceremony, followed by a luncheon for 60 guests at Danville Country Club. The couple then left for a two-week motor trip to Canada and the northeastern states.

For the wedding festivities, the bride wore a white jersey blouson with intricate cutout detail on the long sleeves. She had peach roses and baby's breath in her hair and carried an arm bouquet of yellow daisy mums, peach roses and baby's breath.

HER SISTER Connie of Ishpeming, Mich., was her maid of honor, wearing a peach jersey pinstripe gown and carrying a bouquet of peach roses with white and yellow daisy mums. The bride's sister-in-law, Sharon Meachum of Danville, was bridesmaid in a yellow ensemble to match the maid of honor's.

Kerry Walter served as his brother's best man, while another brother, Thomas, and Bruce Meachum, the bride's brother, ushered.

O'Connor's book 'negative but realistic'

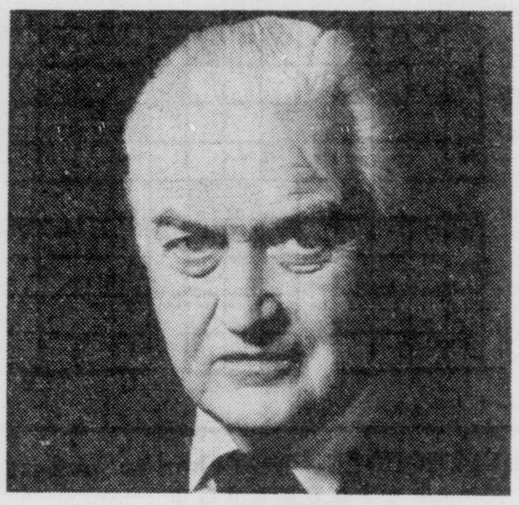

Len O'Connor, the 37-year Chicago broadcast veteran and WGN-TV Channel 9 political commentator, believes his station in life has made him qualified to write a book on the late Mayor Richard J. Daley.

The recently released book, "Requiem," is the first of what is expected to be many secondhand peeks into the private life of the last of the big city bosses. O'Connor's newest book follows his 1974 offering, "Clout," which provided insights about the operation of the Daley machine.

The idea for a second book was thriving before Daley's sudden death from a heart attack last December, O'Connor said, but "it's a book that no one could possibly have written while Daley was still alive. It would have caused a great controversy."

And yet, even on the heels of Daley's death, the book is creating quite a stir.

A DESCRIPTION on the book cover states that O'Connor chronicles the mayor's deteriorating. It is not really the deterioration of a man we witness in "Requiem" but an aging political power slowly losing his grip on people and events.

The book opens with a chapter devoted to the final days and hours of Daley's life, with a wealth of detail and description that comes from a variety of sources and that is what you would expect from a long time journalist. O'Connor said he interviewed many persons including the two Chicago paramedics who first attempted to revive Daley in his doctor's Michigan Ave. office Dec. 20, 1976, and persons who accompanied the mayor to New York for the 1976 Democratic National Convention earlier that year.

However, the book largely relies on the testimony of Dr. Eric Oldberg, head of the Chicago Health Dept. and longtime associate of Daley, and Michael Howlett, former secretary of state.

THE PICTURES that interviews with the two men paint of Daley are not complimentary and seem to support what many of Daley's closest associates and even the public suspected was the case for some time.

The book presents an image of a man who discarded his friends when he no longer needed them or felt he could trust them. It is the picture of a man who becomes despondent over his loss of national prominence, who faces disgrace and even embarrassment during Jimmy Carter's campaign for the Presidency, and a man who becomes physically and emotionally distressed during his final years in office.

He went to extremes to protect the privacy of his family life, became paranoid about being removed by an assassin's hand and became obsessed with retaining his political power.

All those insights are provided by Oldberg and Howlett. Anyone reading the book has to remember that is purely observation on their part. "Requiem" does not contain a single direct quote from Daley or any conversations with members of his family.

O'Connor insists that he's not attempting to cash-in on Daley's death and that his new book is a logical follow-up to "Clout."

"I found that there was no chronology on record of the development of the Daley-styled machine in Chicago and that's what prompted me to write my first book," he said. "The book was intended to identify who people were and I thought it was too laborious to become a sensational best-seller."

BUT, THAT'S what "Clout" did become and O'Connor's latest effort is likely to follow suit just because the public has an unquenched curiosity about Daley.

O'Connor and his publisher are billing the book as a negative but realistic profile of a faltering leader.

Yet in light of some of the criticism of "Requiem" it appears many Daley loyalists are unwilling to part with the all-powerful, idealistic image they have of the man.

The media and journalists will continue to dwell on the essence of Daley for some time, O'Connor said. Television lost its biggest star when he died and "anyone who covers politics in this town knows it is far less interesting without him."

But, that's because as inarticulate and private as Daley was, he was a wizard at using the media to his advantage. Because he was such a dominant public figure, nothing is sacred, O'Connor said, and so "the human frailties that Daley had are bound to come out after his death."

The 65-year-old monotoned commentator was covering Chicago politics in the days when Daley was yet an unknown and the city belonged to Martin Kennelly. It may be that people like O'Connor who have kept a constant vigil on the Daley era have contributed as much to the city's political development as the mayor himself — "only he had a bigger piece," O'Connor said.

"He was a unique kind of political boss who arrived on the scene at a very opportune time, when it was time for important changes in the city to happen anyway," he said

As for O'Connor's role in the Daley era he says, "I'm just another guy in the press box watching and reporting on the ball game. Maybe I'm one of the guys considered to be good at it because I can read into things."

The native Chicagoan who was one of the country's first TV political commentators worked for WMAQ-TV Channel 5 until 1974 when his switch to WGN was prompted by a rift with NBC network news bosses. He has enjoyed less national notoriety with the country's largest independent television station during the past three years and admits he will be ready to retire from the television commentary scene in a few years.

"As far as I'm concerned, this ("Requiem") is all I care to say about Daley. I tried to say it honestly and fairly knowing some pepole would object," he said. "When I handed the manuscript to my publisher I told him the only thing he could count on is they'll say they never said it."

THE WILLIAMSBURG WING.

A place of pride for those in need of nursing care.

When Americana created the Williamsburg Wing, they did it to add a further dimension to health care: elegance.

The Williamsburg Wing is so beautiful it's hard to believe it's in a health care center. But it is. It's special, even spectacular, but it is unquestionably a part of a health care center.

In the Williamsburg Wing, patients receive fine food served in a private dining room. Each room is magnificently decorated and furnished. The sitting room is pleasantly opulent. All over, the atmosphere is quietly, devotedly luxurious.

THE WILLIAMSBURG WING—for people who are accustomed to more. The Williamsburg Wing is not for everyone. It is for those with an appreciation of more tasteful living. It provides the best of two worlds—privacy, elegance and the special services of its staff—and the ready availability of the professional and therapeutic services of the adjoining Americana Healthcare Center.

Call us for an appointment to visit and inspect our accommodations, services and professional staff.

Expert outguesses expert

We don't know if this hand shows experts at their best or worst. South was Claggett Bowie of Baltimore. Claggett knew that he had underbid his hand. He also noted that while the play for seven was poor indeed, six notrump was just as sure a contract as six spades. Since the game was match points, Claggett decided to find some way to make an extra trick at his six-spade contract.

When East discarded a heart at trick one it appeared that the normal play for seven — a heart finesse, followed by the play of the ace to drop the king — would not work.

What would? Maybe West would hold the singleton king or if he had a double-ton king, West could be persuaded to throw the king away. West was an expert and would not think Claggett held as strong a hand as he did.

So Claggett drew trumps, cashed the clubs and diamonds and then played his ace of hearts.

The ordinary West player would never throw the king of hearts, but this West was an expert. He finally decided that Claggett had started with ace-x-x in hearts and that it was up to him to chuck his king to avoid being end played. He did just that and Claggett had his overtrick.

Ask Andy

Elephants come from Asia and Africa

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to John Lachance, Ottawa, Canada, for his question:

ARE THERE TWO TYPES OF ELEPHANTS?

A mother elephant carries her young inside her body for 20 to 22 months. This is a longer period of time than that required by any other animal. There's only one baby most of the time, although twins are born occasionally. The baby weighs about 200 pounds at birth and stands about 3 feet tall. It is just about as long as it is tall and keeps this proportion all his life.

There are two kinds of elephants: the African elephant and the Indian or Asian elephant. The African elephant is the world's largest land animal.

An African elephant is the larger, fiercer and more difficult to train of the two. And it also is heavier. An adult Indian bull elephant, as the male is called, will stand 9 feet tall and weigh from 7,000 to 12,000 pounds while the African bull will be almost 12 feet tall at the shoulder and weigh up to 14,000 pounds.

African pachyderms — that's the scientific name for the elephant — have long ears that are 4 feet wide and are used to whisk away insects. Both the males and females have well-developed tusks that grow from 6 to 8 feet long and weigh as much as 80 pounds each.

Indian or Asian elephants have ears about half the size of the African relatives. Some have tusks that grow to about 5 feet long, but many have no tusks at all.

Asian elephants can be found in the wilds in India and on the mainland of south of the Sahara but not in the extreme southern part of Africa.
elephants run wild in areas that are south of the Saharah but not in the extreme southern part of Africa.

Elephants continue to grow until they are about 20 years old. A female will be able to have a baby when she reaches the age of 14. A baby — called a calf — nurses by curling its trunk over its head so that his mouth can reach his mother's breast. A calf drinks its mother's milk until it is about 3 or 4 years old.

Most elephants live until they are about 60 years old.

Most of the elephants who go into circus work are of the Asian type.

An elephant's trunk is one of his most valuable tools. It measures about 6 feet long and weighs about 300 pounds. It's a boneless mass that bends easily. It can be used to pick up a 600-pound circus tent pole or a single piece of popcorn.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Megan O'Connor, 9, of Pittsburgh, Pa., for her question:

WHERE DOES SAFFLOWER OIL COME FROM?

Oil and meal are made from the seeds of the safflower plant. This thistle-like shrub grows about 3 feet tall and usually is covered with blooms that vary in color from white to bright red. The plant grows in dry areas of Europe, Asia and Africa as well as in the western United States and the privinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Canada.

Oil from the safflower plant is used in diets of people who are suffering from hypertension and heart diseases — or by those who want to restrict the amount of cholesterol found in animal oils. Safflower oil, many medical people say, is better for people than saturated oils.

Safflower oil also is used as a drying agent in varnishes and paints.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.
